Ching, Lewis Hold Talks On Strike In Secret

U. S. Calls Parleys Of Coal Operators; UMW Chief Fails To Break Solid Front

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Government intervened in the soft-coal strike for a second time yesterday—applying gentle peace pressure through the Federal Mediation and Concilation Service.

Chief Federal Conciliator Cyrus S. Ching conferred privately for an hour with John L. Lewis, whose United Mine Workers have been on strike since September 19.

Immediately after the meeting, Ching called on Southern Coal Producers Association negotiators to meet with him here Monday afternoon.

It also was anticipated that later in the week he will meet with representatives of Northern, Western and "captive" (steel-mill-owned) mine operators.

Woman in Crowd Has Question

Ching's renewed activity in the coal strike indicated President Truman was holding firm to his belief the coal strike has not yet developed into a national emergency such as would require him to end the strike—temporarily at least—by using the Taft-Hartley Act.

Some of the President's advisers were reported to be urging Mr. Truman to halt the strike for 80 days through the Taft-Hartley Act.

But the President himself yesterday said he had "no comment" when asked when he was going to do something about the coal strike. The query was made by a woman in the crowd when the Presidential train, en route to Washington from a Midwestern tour, stopped at Willard, Ohio.

Hide-and-Seek Ends

Lewis, who has been frank and blunt in his dislike of Government intervention—even such mild intervention as conciliation and mediation—met with Ching at the latter's invitation.

The secret meeting took place at the Statler Hotel. Lewis disappeared into the upper floors of the hotel after playing hide-and-seek with reporters by hopping in and out of cabs, the hotel, and nearby office buildings.

The elusive, melodramatic tactics were futile. Lewis slipped back into the lobby of the Statler—to find Associated Press Photographer William Smith aiming a camera right at him.

Vanishes in Elevator

The UMW president thereupon aimed a kick in the direction of the camera and roared:

"You can't make a hippodrome out of this."

Lewis then vanished by way of an elevator. The photographer escaped unscathed, the camera was damaged slightly.

Once before the Federal Government, via Ching, had intervened in the drawn-out coal walkout.

In mid-October, when negotiations between the union and operators had just about collapsed, Ching called both sides into Washington, and, after a full day's conference, got them to agree to renew contract discussions. But these, too, have reached a dead-end deadlock.

Earlier in the day, Lewis jabbed

$2,003,187 Collected in Chest Drive

Campaign Goes Past The Half-Way Mark; Certificates Given To Ten Companies

Greater Washington's Community Chest drive yesterday passed the half-way mark with pledges of $2,003,187 reported for the first week—a new record for the area.

Reports made at luncheons of large business and Government units in the Hotel Washington boosted the campaign total from $1,800,277.

In the business group session, collections of $1,467,296 were reported from a total of 802,532 donors. This constitutes 54.69 percent of the quota.

The Rev. John Rustin, pastor of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, urged business group solicitors to break down the attitude of residents who take the position, "We don't want to hear anything about the less fortunate," or "Everything will be all right anyway."

He denounced such diffidence as part of the philosophy of "getting something for nothing" in that these persons "expect to live in a decent city, but won't pay the price."

Certificates were presented to 10 concerns for outstanding records in the drive. They are Government Services, Inc.; the Hecht Co.; Sears, Roebuck & Co.; Charles G. Stott & Co.; Fred S. Gichner Iron Works, Inc.; Statler Hotel; Shannon & Luchs Co.; Perpetual Building Association; Group Hospitalization, Inc.. and Capitol Cadillac Co.

At the Government luncheon, reports were made that 23,717 donors reached since the previous report had pledged $168,185, bringing the total up to $1,000,101, or 63.08 percent of the quota.

Strickland Gillilan, humorist, spoke at the meeting.

Failing B-29 Lets Airliner Land; 10 Die

Hamilton, Bermuda, Nov. 4 (AP).—A Superfortress pilot nursing a faulty engine let a commercial airliner land ahead of him then crashed to his death with nine other Americans, an official report disclosed today.

The accident occurred last night. Three of the plane's 13 passengers escaped.

Officials of Kindley Field Air Base, the plane's destination, listed the pilot as Maj. Roy H. Burns, of Brookville, Ind.

He and two other men were listed as missing. They were First Lieut. Andrew J. Rooks of College Park, Ga., the copilot, and Sergt. Preston L. Treadway, Chelsea, Okla.

Names of others were withheld.

The official report said the B-29 was cruising at 10,000 feet on a weather flight. The pilot noticed one of his engines leaking and advised base operations he wished to land.

At about this time, a Pan-American stratocruiser called the tower saying it wished to come in. The tower told it to hold off until the B-29 could land. At 4000 feet, the B-29 told the ground control that since the passenger plane was at landing height, and the Superfortress would require a longer period to descend, it should land.

The stratocruiser touched down, and had cleared the field when the B-29 asked for permission to make an extra turn around the field before landing. At the last moment, the pilot decided to make an immediate landing, and headed for the field.

The plane dropped about 300 yards from shore.

Bolling B-25 Simulated Landing Near Airport Here

Disclosure Raises Possibility Bolivian And DC-4 Pilot Both Misunderstood

By Benjamin C. Bradlee
Copyright, 1949 by The Washington Post Co.

A third airplane was in the air approaches above National Airport Tuesday morning just before the Bolivian P-38 and the Eastern Airliner DC-4 collided near the field, taking 55 lives, it was learned last night.

The presence of the third plane— hitherto undisclosed—raised the possibility that control tower instructions were misunderstood by pilots of either or both of the colliding airplanes.

A spokesman for Bolling Air Force Base corroborated that the third plane was a B-25 based at the Defense Establishment field across the Potomac from the National Airport.

Simulated Landing

The B-25 made a simulated instrument landing, flying within 200 feet of the National Airport landing strips between 11:30 a. m. and 11:35 a. m. Tuesday, the air base spokesman said. The fatal crash occurred at 11:46 a. m.

Meanwhile, according to the air base official, the B-25 turned to the left, circled nearby Mount Vernon, landing at Bolling Field at 11:48 a. m., two minutes after the two planes collided just south of National.

Towerman Glenn D. Tigner, 21, one of two airport traffic controllers in the National tower when the crash occurred, declined last night to give a direct answer to a question on the existence of the B-25.

"Hardly Know What to Say"

Asked to comment on the disclosure of the B-25's flight, Tigner said: "I hardly know what to say. I don't know whether I should answer any of your questions."

Asked to comment on the possibility that the P-38 pilot did not know that last minute warning instructions were for him, Tigner asserted that all such orders were preceded by the pilot's plane number. Tigner referred all further questions to CAA public relations officials.

Bolling Air Force Base figured in the initial reports of the crash Tuesday morning. These reports incorrectly stated that the Bolivian plane had taken off from the military field.

The information about the B-25 was elicited from the Bolling Field spokesman, after reports were received that officials probing the crash—the worst one in American history—had learned of the existence of the third plane.

These officials, it was reported, were interested in learning whether Erick Rios Bridoux, the Bolivian pilot, may have thought that he was under instructions from the National Airport tower to land immediately after the B-25 instead of after the airliner.

Told He Was Second to Land

The Bolivian was told that he was the second to land at National. It is not known whether Bridoux knew that both the B-25 and the DC-4 were in the air at that time.

A spokesman for the Civil Aeronautics Authority said it was not customary to advise pilots of the

Truman Home, Mum on Coal, Steel Strikes

Passes Through Area Hit By Shutdowns Without Comment

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

President Truman returned to Washington last night through coal-and-steel-producing Ohio and Pennsylvania without comment on the strike-darkened blast furnaces and idle coal mines.

His special train arrived in Washington at 10:15 p. m. and he drove immediately to Blair House.

At station stops en route back from St. Paul, Minn., he not only withheld comment on the coal and steel strikes, but he also passed up an opportunity to slug Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio). Instead, he paid Taft a compliment.

For the third successive day Mr. Truman received State and local Democratic leaders and appeared on the rear platform in what he jokingly describes as his "bi-partisan Democratic" role.

Sleeps Through Pittsburgh

The President slept through Pittsburgh, hardest-hit city in the steel-coal belt. A copy of the Pittsburgh Press, with headlines bannering, "Coal Shortage Grips City," was passed up to the rear platform at Pittsburgh, but it was explained that Mr. Truman was napping.

Usually-humming steel plants near Gary, Ind., Youngstown, Ohio, and Pittsburgh seemed quiet as the President's train passed.

So far as the steel strike was concerned, the Administration is believed to be leaving the situation entirely in the hands of Cyrus Ching, director of the Federal Mediation service.

Strong Earthquake Shakes San Diego; Buildings Jarred

San Diego, Calif., Nov. 4 (AP).—A strong earthquake shook San Diego and rocked 10,000 square miles of southern California at 12:43 p. m. Pacific Standard Time (3:43 p. m., EST) today.

Sharpest quake here in eight years, it jarred buildings with a powerful upthrust motion followed by a north-south movement.

The tremor was felt lightly in Los Angeles, Long Beach, Riverside, Santa Ana and there was a clear shock in El Centro.

The quake was felt slightly at San Bernardino, but not at nearby Arrowhead Springs, almost directly atop the State's greatest earthquake fault, San Andreas.

California Institute of Technology's seismograph, in Pasadena, showed the center of quake was about 150 miles from here. It was of 5—plus intensity on the scale of 12.

Steps Taken To Control U. S. Exports

The Commerce Department yesterday took strong action in a new program to tighten export controls. The purpose is to prevent leaks of strategic materials and manufactures to Communist areas in Europe and Asia.

It placed new controls on about 100 specific commodity classifications which were already subject to export license if they are bound for Europe. The new regulations require export permits for all other destinations except Canada.

The action was taken, it was learned, to meet two problems:

1. The opportunity, through absence of export licensing requirements, for shipments of strategic materials to Communist China.

2. The shipment of some strategic items, heretofore unrestricted, to a nation in South America or Asia, whence it could be transshipped to Russia or its satellites.

The new rules mean that the Commerce Department will have applications for export of these items to screen first, before permitting their shipment.

Some of the commodities covered by the requirement are special puncture-seal tires, lubricating oils, certain iron and steel products, generators, large electric motors, metal working machines, mining machinery, oil well and refining equipment and X-ray apparatus.

For Insurance Refunds

Veterans' Serial Numbers Key to When Checks Go Out

The Veterans' Administration yesterday announced a formula for paying the $2,800,000,000 insurance refund that gives GIs and high brass an equal break and helps them figure when the checks may arrive.

The checks will begin going out in January. About 16 million veterans of World War II will split the dividend plum.

The last three digits of the veteran's serial number will determine the order of payment. The VA said this system was devised as the most nondiscriminatory.

Any system based on full serial numbers, it was explained, might give precedence to officers who had lower numbers than enlisted men.

To set the system up, VA will separate all dividend applications into 10 units based on the last digit—from zero to 9. At that stage, the formula using the last three digits comes into the picture. They determine the actual order in which payments will be made.

For a veteran to figure out where he stands in the payoff schedule, here's how it will work:

First, disregard everything but the last three digits of the serial number. Those that end with 000, 001, 002, 003, 004, 005, 006, 007, 008 and 009 will be in the first mailing. They represent the first number in each of the 10 groups.

The second mailing goes to veterans whose numbers end with 010, 011, 012, etc. That's the way it goes, right down the line.

Those with serial numbers ending in 990, 991, 992, etc., are at the end of the line.

The VA expects to mail about 200,000 checks a day, 20,000 from each of the 10 units.

For veterans who had more than one serial number while in service, the one on his insurance certificate will be used.

The VA stressed that the payoff formula has nothing to do with the application number veterans found on the acknowledgment cards sent out to confirm that dividend claims were received.

Ban of Book On Yamashita Is Defended

Tokyo, Nov. 4 (AP).—A qualified occupation source today said Japanese newspapers and publishers have been told it would be "unwise" to publish a new American book about the trial of Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, executed for war crimes in the Philippines.

The source, who cannot be identified, said the book was regarded as an attack on General MacArthur, President Truman and the United States Supreme Court. All three have been held up as models to the Japanese.

The book is "The Case of General Yamashita," by Frank Reel, defense counsel for Yamashita. It is regarded as sympathetic to the

New York, Nov. 4 (U.P.)—After an evening together at the ballet "Sleeping Beauty," a Chinese United Nations clerk and the wife of a Washington, D. C. man returned to a hotel early today where the Chinese plunged a knife into the woman's nude body 17 times.

Then Wei Huan Kuo, 28, lay down on the twin bed beside Mrs. Mushana Blanska Zolyak, 33, Bulgarian translator for the Voice of America, and drove the 4½-inch hunting knife six times into his own chest. Draped near them was his gift—a woman's silken Oriental gown.

Both were dead when a bellhop, investigating a telephone off the hook, found them. Wei's hands were folded calmly over his chest. Mrs. Zolyak's red-manicured fingertips were coated with blood. The seventeenth-floor room showed no struggle.

There were no suicide notes but a search of Wei's regular room in a Y. M. C. A. produced a small piece of paper on which was written:

"We are that way because American men give us everything, everything but love."

Six Arrested as Vice Squad Stages Lewd Picture Raids

Six men were arrested yesterday afternoon in two downtown raids by vice squad policemen and charged with possession of "obscene, lewd, indecent or suggestive" literature or pictures.

In one of the raids, both of which were made on search warrants, the raiding officers seized two large cartons of packets of pictures, many of them of women in various stages of undress, and in different poses.

At the other place, no pictures were found, and the proprietor told Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the vice squad, that he had been tipped off by telephone that the place would be raided and he sent his stock of the pictures by automobile into Maryland.

The first raid was about 1 p. m., at a newsstand at 603 15th st. nw., across from the Treasury building. Arrested were Herbert Jerome Benjamin, 51, the alleged proprietor, and two employes, Modesto Lucero, 26, of 1325 16th st. nw., and Wilmer J. Nash, 32, who gave the newsstand address.

Benjamin protested vigorously that his arrest was "unjust." He told Lieutenant Blick and reporters that he had stocked and sold the picture packets for a year; that six months ago he had submitted "about 100" samples of them to the United States attorney's office, and was told they were "all right" and he could "go ahead and sell them."

However, Lieutenant Blick said that the packets being sold now are different from the ones Benjamin submitted to the United States attorney's office. Blick said an undercover agent of the vice squad made purchases of the pictures Thursday, that they were submitted to the United States attorney's office, and warrants were issued.

The second raid was at the Midway Arcade, 1206 New York ave. nw., about 4 p. m. There, the officers arrested James E. Lasiter, 35, the proprietor, of 210 Orange st. se., and two employes, Mark N. Gerber, 33, of 42 Underwood st.

How'll You Mark Sunday Post Ballot on Radio in Trolleys?

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

How are you going to vote in Sunday's Washington Ballot on radio broadcasts in streetcars and buses?

The ballot, to be printed in The Washington Post Sunday, will give residents a chance to vote "Yes, I favor radio broadcasts in streetcars and buses" or "No, I do not favor radio broadcasts in streetcars and buses."

To help voters feel right about their decision, whichever side they take, The Washington Post today, on Page 9 presents the arguments pro and con by two individuals whose difference on the radio issue has not marred their personal friendship.

The case for radio is presented by Paul H. Bolton, executive vice president of the National Association of Wholesalers.

The case against radio is presented by R. A. Seelig, director of information for the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association.

Their friendship stems from their membership in the American Public Relations Association.

Neither has any connection with Capital Transit Co. or Washington Transit Radio, Inc., whose contract set up the radio plan here. Officials of both firms, however, personally expressed satisfaction with the choice of Bolton to present the pro-radio case, after having heard him present his views in a radio broadcast.

Bolton was war-time information director for the Office of Defense Transportation. Earlier he was owner of two large national advertising agencies. He did not take part in the PUC hearing.

Seelig served eight years as secretary to former United States Senator Homer Bone of Washington. Before that he was political reporter for the Spokesman-Review, in Spokane, Wash. He spoke for the Transit Riders Association at the PUC hearing.

Johnson Lauds Army Fire Power

Fort Benning, Ga., Nov. 4 (AP).—Defense Secretary Johnson commented today that an enemy would be "shocked" to find how much the Army's fire power has increased.

Johnson made the comment to reporters as he sat with virtually the entire military high command through a morning of weapons demonstration by troops of this infantry center.

Among the military chiefs who came to Fort Benning with Johnson was the new Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Forrest P. Sherman.

Sherman's visit here was a quick, one-day trip away from the job he took over only yesterday.

Both Sherman and Navy Secretary Francis Matthews have asserted they foresee no further major changes in personnel or functions of Navy organizations following the firing of Admiral Louis Denfeld and the scuttling of "Operation 23," the Navy unit reported to have directed the fight against Pentagon policy under the unification program.

Sherman told reporters that the abolition of Operation 23 was "without prejudice to Capt. Arleigh Burke (director of the unit) who is one of the finest officers in the Navy." Operation 23, said Sherman, was ended because it "had outlived its usefulness."

Sherman was asked about the role of naval aviation under his new regime as Chief of Naval Operations. Commenting that he had been a naval aviator since 1922 and that "there is no doubt where my feelings lie," Sherman replied:

"The role of naval aviation is just what it has been, a very important part of the Navy. It will be kept in proper proportion to the Navy and that proportion will be as large as the financial situation will permit."

Naval aviation, he said, is the core of naval power.

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Gen. J. Lawton Collins reported yesterday that the postwar rebuilding of the Army is nearly complete and that within four or five months "we'll be ready to fight."

By then, the Army Chief of Staff declared, the Nation's ten divisions at home and abroad will be "ready to take on anybody in the world, anywhere, any time."

Addressing the National Press Club, Collins gave this and other assurances to the American people but warned of certain deficiencies.

"Frankly," he said, "our tanks aren't as good as the Russian tanks."

And Collins pointed out that "our only potential enemy" is the "world's greatest land power." In fact, in predicting the Army would soon be able to "take on" anyone, he made it plain he's speaking of division for division and not the American Army vs. the Russian Army.

It has been reliably reported that the Soviets have 175 divisions in being.

The Army chief declared that plans are ready for the armed forces to move in and restore order in case of an atomic attack.

"I want to assure you that the critical areas in this country have been analyzed and with means available we are ready to move at once to restore order," he said.

"We will not be unprepared," he added.

Collins said the United States Army's artillery was "still the best in the world," but that in recoilless weapons and antiaircraft guns as well as tanks we are lagging.

Recently, he said, he had seen in Detroit a light tank as good as any in the world, and "all we need is a little money to build them." Prototypes of first-class medium and heavy tanks also are ready, Collins said.

The general said, "We're not complaining about that" and added that the Army is willing to "take its chance" of getting the funds out of the budget.

Collins declared that the First Division and three constabulary regiments in Germany and the Eighty-second Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C., are in "first class shape." The other division in this country and those in the Far East are still rebuilding but should be ready by spring, he declared.

Discussing Russian strength, Collins said that its air force and ours are about a "50-50 standoff."

The Army chief was asked for his views on the Marines and gave assurances he was perfectly satisfied for them to remain under the Navy and to keep their divisions. Ge Clifton B. Cates, Marine commandant, charged on Capitol Hill that the Army wanted to take over the Leathernecks or reduce their units to regiments.

"We're far more interested in airborne than amphibious operations," said Collins, adding that t' bulk of the Army's money would go for training and equipment in this newer type of warfare.

Barkley's Bride-to-Be In Hospital With Flu

St. Louis, Nov. 4 (AP).—Mrs. Carleton S. Hadley, Vice President Alben W. Barkley's finance, was in a hospital today with a slight touch of the flu, but the wedding is still definitely set for November 18.

Her mother, Mrs. Estelle Rucker, said Mrs. Hadley needed some rest because "the telephone and the doorbell have been ringing almost constantly since plans for the wedding were announced." She went to the hospital late yesterday.

The Vice President is due back here today or Saturday.

Uncle Says Color Of Seretse's Wife Isn't Main Issue

Johannesburg, South Africa, Nov. 4 (AP).—Ruth Williams' white skin alone has not disqualified her husband as chief of the powerful Bamangwato tribe, a British inquiry commission was told today.

"The fact that Ruth is white does not affect this matter," aging Tshekedi Khama, tribal regent and uncle of her Negro husband, Seretse Khama, told the commission. "It would be the same if she were African. But he disqualified himself by maintaining, contrary to Bamangwato custom, that his marriage to Ruth had the effect of making her queen and mother of the future chief."

Seretse's marriage to the former London typist while he was attending Oxford University was without tribal consent. However, a majority of the tribesmen, at a subsequent palaver, supported his claim to leadership.

Czechs Reject U. S. Protest In 'Spy' Cases

Prague, Nov. 4 (U.P.)—Czechoslovakia's Communist government tonight rejected the United States' stiff protest against the expulsion of two American diplomats and the arrest of a United States embassy clerk, all on espionage charges.

Neither the American Embassy nor the Czech foreign office would disclose the reasons given for Czechoslovakia's rejection of the strongly-worded American protest lodged with the foreign ministry on October 26.

The American protest was against the expulsion of political attaches Isaac Patch and John G. Heyn and the arrest of Samuel Meryn, Czech-born New Yorker who is in Pankrac prison. Meryn does not have diplomatic immunity.

Embassy spokesmen called the spy charges "trumped up" and on October 26 delivered the "stiff protest" to the foreign office. Three days later the United States warned that "further steps" would be taken against Czechoslovakia.

On October 31 the United States demanded that Czechoslovakia recall two of its agents. The State Department declined to give a reason.

The Czechs ousted were Dr. Ervin Munk, 43, consul general at New York, and Jan Horvath, 41, housekeeper of the Czech Embassy in Washington.

U. S. Demands Details Of Meryn 'Spy' Charge

The United States demanded yesterday that Czechslovakia spell out its espionage charges against Embassy Clerk Samuel Meryn.

Undersecretary of State James E. Webb called in Czechoslovakian Ambassador Vladimir Outrata and asked him for details of the charges against Meryn. Oustrata declined to discuss the conversation afterward.

West Germans, Saar May Join Europe Council

Paris, Nov. 4 (NYHT).—The committee of ministers of the Council of Europe agreed today to invite Western Germany and the Saar Territory to send representatives to the council's consultative assembly, but decided not to issue the invitation until the assembly's standing committee had its say on the question.

The admission of Austria to the council, whose aim is to unify Europe, was also discussed, but it was decided not to invite Austria at this time. The Austrians do not want to be invited now because they fear that if they joined the council the Russians would be less likely to agree to an Austrian peace treaty.

Western Germany is to be invited to become an associate member of the council. This means it can send representatives to the consultative assembly. It will not be represented on the committee of ministers, which is composed of the foreign ministers of the member countries.

The assembly's 28-member standing committee, headed by Paul-Henri Spaak, will meet here Monday to give its views on the admission of Germany and the Saar. Admission of Germany will be delayed, since the committee is not expected to meet again until January.

France has insisted that the Saar be admitted separately to membership in the council at the same time as Germany, and also an associate member.

'Watchdog' In Greece Voted By U. N. Again

Lake Success, Nov. 4. (NYHT)—The Political Committee of the United Nations General Assembly voted 38 to 6, with 2 abstentions, today that the U. N. must continue for another year its special watchdog committee in Greece.

The resolution, which also asked all U. N. members to impose an arms embargo on Albania and Bulgaria, to keep them from supplying weapons to the Greek Communist guerillas, found Yugoslavia joining the Soviet bloc in opposition to the majority decision.

After approving the Balkan resolution, which had been proposed jointly by the United States, Britain, Australia and China, the Political Committee overwhelmingly defeated, in a series of part-by-part votes, a Russian resolution calling for termination of the Balkan Committee, a political amnesty, Greek elections in which the Communists could take part, and a Soviet voice in supervising the election and in "controlling" the Greek frontiers.

The resolution approved today gives Yugoslavia a comparatively clean bill of health on aid to the rebels.

With the Greek question out of the way, the committee moved on to the complex Italian colonies question.

MacArthur Believed Expecting Pact Soon

In Blockade

British Warn China Not to Strafe Ships

By Frank L. White

Manila, Nov. 4. (AP).—A high Allied occupation source in Japan said Gen. Douglas MacArthur expects a peace treaty with Japan to be signed in Tokyo early next year.

This source, who can not be named, said the Allied occupation chief was highly gratified at the progress made since British Foreign Secretary Bevin and U. S. Secretary of State Acheson reportedly reached agreement on all major points during economic discussions in Washington.

Communist China and Russia may be present at the time the victorious World War II allies lay down their terms for defeated Japan's reentry into world affairs—but only if they agree to British-American plans already well developed, this source said.

To Resist Red Pressure

Any attempt by the Soviets and Chinese Reds to insist on veto power at the peace conference will be rejected flatly, this official said.

Major points of the proposed treaty, said this source, include:

1. The treaty will concern only damages, reparations, terms for future relations with other nations and provisions for maintaining democratic reforms.

2. After the treaty, Japan will be invited to enter into a pact providing her with military defenses.

3. Japan may enter the United Nations with that body guaranteeing territorial integrity; or Japan may grant to America Air Force, Navy and Army bases on long-time terms. Under this, the present strength and position of occupation forces would hardly be changed except for abolition of Allied occupation headquarters.

London, Nov. 4. (AP) — Britain warned Nationalist China today against the use of air attacks to enforce a blockade of Communist-held seaports in China.

Britain said any such attacks on unarmed merchant ships would be regarded as "an illegitimate and unfriendly act."

A Foreign Office spokesman said the Nationalist Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Cheng Tien-hsi, was summoned to the Foreign Office and given the warning.

The British warning apparently followed a report the Chinese Nationalist government intends to attack from the air foreign merchant ships found in Chinese territorial waters.

Red Troops Moving Toward Chungking

Chungking, Nov. 4 (U.P.).—The Communist armies were reported converging today on the mountain village of Kienkiang, 130 air miles east of Chungying, in a general offensive against this refugee Nationalist capital.

Chinese press reports said military leaders, at a conference here, had decided to organize a new army of 500,000 men called the "Peoples Anti-Communist National Salvation Army" to fight the advancing Reds.

New York Acts To Deny Vote To Two Reds

New York, Nov. 4 (AP). — The State attorney general moved today to bar two convicted Communist Party leaders, Benjamin J. Davis, jr., and John Gates, from voting in next Tuesday's election.

Attorney General Nathaniel L. Goldstein said only Davis and Gates, of the 11 party leaders convicted of conspiracy last month, had registered to vote in the election.

Orders were obtained by Goldstein in State Supreme Court requiring both men to show cause by 10 a. m. next Monday why they should not be prevented from voting.

Davis, a Negro, is a city councilman running for reelection.

400 Extra Police in Harlem

The attorney general acted under a State Law which says no person convicted of a felony in Federal Court shall have the right to register or vote unless pardoned or restored to citizenship rights by the President.

Meanwhile, nearly 400 extra police patrolled Harlem today and tonight, alert for any new disorder among its Negro residents.

A torchlight welcome-home parade last night for Davis ended in a flareup which officers attributed to "hoodlums." Six police were hurt as 2000 demonstrators surged through crowded streets, and sticks and stones rained from rooftops.

Davis spoke at five open-air meetings in Harlem tonight but there was no disorder.

Ban of Book Is Defended wartime Japanese commander in the Philippines.

This source feels the book presents only the defense case for Yamashita and that it might glorify the militarism of which Yamashita was a part. The whole story of the trial was made available to the Japanese along with the appeal to the United States Supreme Court and the minority dissenting opinions.

"Let's not kid ourselves," one occupation official said. "This is a military opration and we don't have complete press freedom. We are trying to eliminate certain ideas and conditions here—including ultranationalism and militarism.

"What kind of a job would we be doing if we permitted publication of news of books which we think would glorify or express sympathy for the very things we are trying to eliminate?"

Some Japanese have obtained English language copies.

In Chicago, the director of the University of Chicago Press, publisher of the book, called the ban "tyranny."

William T. Couch has sent an open letter to United States Senators, asking whether they intend to challenge the ban.

Senate Unit Lands In Luxembourg For Cocktails

Luxembourg, Nov. 4 (AP).—A U. S. Senate subcommittee landed here today and got a joyous welcome from the American minister, Mrs. Perle Mesta.

Mrs. Mesta and Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) kissed as the subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee stepped stepped from the plane.

The Senators were to be guests at a cocktail party later at the American Legation.

The Gallup Poll

New York State Voters Favor Communist Party Ban, 2 to 1

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 4.—The conviction and sentencing of the 11 American Communist leaders has raised the question whether Congress should do anything about curbing the Communist Party.

The voters of New York State, where the historic nine-month trial was held, believe the party should be outlawed, judging by results of a State-wide survey just completed by the institute.

Persons who prefer the Republican candidate in the current Senatorial race, John Foster Dulles, are more in favor of outlawing the Communists than persons who prefer the Democratic candidate, Herbert H. Lehman.

New Yorkers have a special interest in the issue because one of the convicted Communist leaders is City Councilman Benjamin Davis, who is up for reelection November 8, and because the American Labor Party candidate for Mayor of New York, Congressman Vito Marcantonio, has frequently been accused of Communist leanings.

Here is how New York votes:

"Do you think membership in the Communist Party in this country should be forbidden by law?"

The total sample:

Yes	60%
No	28
No Opinion	12

Here are the views of persons who say they either plan definitely to vote for Lehman for Senator or who are "leaning" in that direction, and the views of those who are definitely for or leaning toward Dulles.

	Outlaw C.P.	Don't Outlaw	No Opin.
Prefer Lehman	53%	35%	12%
Prefer Dulles	71	19	10
Not registered or not planning to vote	59	24	17

The second question in the survey was this:

"Would you favor or oppose a law requiring all members of the Communist Party in this country to register (file their names) with the Justice Department in Washington?"

The vote:

	Favor	Oppose	No Opin.
Total sample	68%	19%	13%
Prefer Lehman	62	27	11
Prefer Dulles	81	8	11
Not registered or not planning to vote	62	16	22

Election Victory in London Buoys Labor For '50 Campaign

London, Nov. 4 (AP).—The Labor Party won an election to the London County Council today and political observers pounced on it as a significant straw-in-the-wind for next year's general elections.

The voting—in a cross-section electoral district—gave the Labor majority over a Conservative and two other candidates.

Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison, apparently well pleased candidate, Jack Cooper, a clear with the result, sent the district labor committee a chipper telegram.

"A splendid victory; another beautiful morning; outlook fine," it read.

The improvement in the Labor Party's political organization was apparent. It worked in high gear.

The election was called because of the death of D. C. Griffiths, a Conservative, in the North Kensington district of West London, an area with voters from all classes.

Cooper today got 14,197 votes; Ian Percival, his Conservative opponent 13,100; John Eyre, Communist, 464; and Miss Chrystal Gates, of the left-wing intellectual Commonwealth Party, 135.

The victory increased Labor's narrow control of the county council.

British Asia Parley Ends in Singapore

Singapore, Nov. 4 (AP).—Britain's top Far Eastern advisers and officials concluded a three-day Asian policy conference here today.

Decisions, including one on Britain's future relations with Communist China, were not made public.

Former Iran Premier Shot In Mosque

Tehran, Iran, Nov. 4 (AP).—Former Premier Abdul Hussein Hazhir was wounded by a pistol shot tonight and the government immediately imposed martial law.

Hazhir, now a court minister, was rushed to a hospital, where it was found he was not seriously injured.

Police arrested a man they identified as Hussein Immani.

The shooting took place after a religious ceremony at the Sapahsalar Mosque, in which Hazhir was representing the Shah. Many Iranian notables were present.

As a crowd passed by the place where the notables were seated the assailant drew a gun and fired at Hazhir, hitting him in the left side of the chest. The motive was not announced.

United States Ambassador John C. Wiley and his wife were among those who went to the hospital to see the wounded minister.

Big Freighter Afire Off Washington Coast

Seattle, Nov. 4 (AP).—An engine room fire drove the big freighter Andalucia to an uncertain fate on a shoal off the northern Washington coast early today.

The Coast Guard reported a radio message said she was leaking badly.

The 27-man crew started abandoning the ship at 12:20 p. m., the Coast Guard reported. The cutter Fir was expected to pick them up.

Acheson Will Confer in Paris Next Week With British, French Foreign Ministers

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Secretary of State Acheson will leave here, probably early next week, for a two-day conference in Paris with the French and British Foreign Ministers.

The two principal items on the agenda are a unified policy on Germany and its relationship to the rest of Europe, and the economic organization, or integration, of Europe itself.

Confirmation of the conference, intimated for a day or two before, came in announcements yesterday in the three nations' capitals. A final date has not yet been set, but is expected to be made known this morning.

Call Held Unexpected

The call for the meeting came unexpectedly to the State Department, it was learned. British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin made the suggestion that while he was in Paris for meetings of the Council of Europe's Committee of Ministers, Acheson join him and French Foreign Minister Schuman.

The principal impetus for the sessions from the European side, it appeared, was French and British concern at a growing split in the three nations' policy toward Germany.

It was learned officially, however, that Acheson, while deeply concerned with this issue, is interested equally in pressing for concrete steps toward the economic integration of Europe and determining the measures that can be taken toward a more unified organization of Europe in other fields.

Both topics, accordingly, were listed for the agenda in communiques made public in London, Paris and Washington yesterday. A third item listed was the Atlantic Pact.

Other Issues Suggested

It was considered probable that other issues would come under discussion. These might include Communist China and its recognition and a coordinated policy on Yugoslavia, now under increasingly menacing pressure from Moscow.

But uppermost in Acheson's mind, it was intimated by informed officials, is the thought that time is running out for Europe to take the bold steps toward a concrete, unified and permanent organization.

Without such integration, particularly in the economic sphere, its salvation is unlikely, American officials believe.

In pressing this point of view Acheson will be backstopping and reinforcing appeals made last week to the European ministers by Paul Hoffman, head of the Economic Cooperation Administration.

In his speech to the ECA's overseas counterpart, the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, Hoffman pleaded for prompt and firm action to eliminate barriers to intra-European trade.

He implied that steps must be taken also toward a stronger and more authoritative organization to guide European economic affairs.

Acheson also advocates this goal, though he may have different methods in mind than Hoffman. Or—what seems more likely—he may be hoping for next week's meeting to produce indications of the best procedures.

There are several possibilities. For one, the OEEC itself might be strengthened, becoming less of a group of emissaries from each of the 18 Marshall Plan nations, each constrained by orders from the "home office," and more of a self-determining body, with authority of its own.

Abandoning the principal of unanimity on which its present actions must be taken, it could operate on majority vote, perhaps something on the order of a regulatory body similar to the American Federal Trade Commission.

It then would have authority to remove trade restrictions, such as tariffs and quota controls, and prevent their reimposition.

If the OEEC is deemed to be too inclusive a group to operate with such a degree of authority, it is conceivable suggestions will be made for a tighter organization embracing fewer countries.

The principal of smaller regional groupings, with more delegated powers and less reliance on mere "cooperation," is known to be indorsed by both ECA and the State Department.

Still another object for discussions on greater integration is the Council of Europe itself. It is probable Acheson would like to see that body with more power.

Also conceivable are suggestions for bringing OECC and the Council of Europe into closer unity.

Yesterday, informed sources hinted that entirely new organizations might be found desirable for the goal of integration. They mentioned, specifically, a body to concern itself with European currency problems, which are as restrictive to trade, or more so, than actual commercial barriers.

Could Set Up Dollar Pool

Such a body, it has been suggested, could assume some of the functions that the Federal Reserve System carries out in the United States. With sufficient powers, it could regulate credit and exchange rates and work for convertibility of European currencies.

It might manage also a dollar pool for some or all the Marshall Plan countries, as a currency stabilization device.

It is not anticipated that the two-day meeting will, in itself, produce any such full-blown results. Rather, it is hoped that some methods may be developed and perhaps some firm commitments taken.

The longer such steps toward integration and unified organization are deferred, American officials are convinced, the harder they will be to achieve in the end.

The problems of Germany the three ministers will face are equally urgent and difficult.

The American view is that the three nations must work together to bring Germany tightly into emerging European political and economic organizations. Otherwise it may "run off the track" as in the '20s and develop, as in the '30s, into a sullen, aggressive, noncooperative power, playing off all sides against the others.

As one official put it yesterday, "Germany must be made a sane, decent member of the European community."

A major difficulty to the fitting of Germany into the picture of an integrated Europe is the French fear of a resurgence of German industrial—and hence potential war-making—power.

France is considered unlikely to accept Germany into a tighter European society unless it has the assurance Great Britain will enter into the new or strengthened European organization, and without reservations.

So far, the United Kingdom has held back from such steps. Its relationship with the British Commonwealth, its alleged intent to maintain a special and privileged relationship with the U.S., and the Socialist philosophy of its government all are adduced as reasons for its hesitancy.

Nevertheless, Bevin and Schuman are said to fear that as time has passed, their countries and the U. S. are drifting further and further from a unified approach to Germany. All three nations, aware of this and concerned about it, may be willing to make concessions and find a common ground.

Secretary Acheson's departure may take place as early as Monday night. He must remain here during the day to receive a visit from Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky. The USSR official's visit is, as far as is known, simply a courtesy call. He is coming here to attend an embassy party celebrating the anniversary of the Russian Revolution.

Acheson must be back in Washington November 16, at the latest, to be here at the time of a visit from the Shah of Iran.

Driver Dies in Crash As Car Leaps 93 Feet

A young motorist was killed early yesterday in a spectacular crash when his automoblie ran over a small monument, hurtled 93 feet through the air, and continued on to shear off one tree and pile up against another.

The accident happened soon after 2 a. m. on Wisconsin ave., just across the District line in Maryland.

The victim was Francis Joseph McKee, 20, of 5522 Bradley blvd., Bethesda. His body was thrown through the windshield of the 1949 sedan by the impact against the second tree. Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, said McKee died of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Pvts. James C. Teague and Charles M. Blackburn, motorcycle officers of the Metropolitan Police traffic division, reported that they had stopped at Wisconsin ave. and Upton st. nw., to make their 1 a. m., hourly box call, when McKee's car sped past them, northbound.

"It was going at least 60 to 65 miles an hour then," Teague said. "We chased it and were two blocks behind when it crashed. We never even got close. I doubt if he knew we were back of him."

Montgomery County police said that though the west line of Wisconsin ave., is straight, the east line opens up to the right to accommodate a center parking area that begins just beyond the streetcar and bus terminal at Western ave. Northbound autos must turn slightly to the right.

They said that McKee did not make this turn, but went over a small, triangular center island. In the island is a natural rock monument with a bronze plate, placed by the DAR to commemorate the founding of Montgomery County in 1776.

The car struck the monument, the policeman said, and took off in the air, "like a skier from a ski jump." It struck the ground 93 feet away, continued on, and to the right. The vehicle traveled 155 feet from the monument before crashing into the second tree. McKee's body was catapulted 20 feet farther. Parts of the car, officers said, were strewn and thrown for 60 yards.

Police at first were mystified by women's clothing found near the wreck. They searched an hour for a supposed woman companion of the driver. Later they learned the clothing belonged to a relative of McKee and was in a shopping bag in the auto.

McKee, who was a native of Erie, Pa., served briefly in the Navy after attending Valley Forge Military Academy. He came here two months ago to live with his aunt, Mrs. Francis C. Hayes, who was his legal guardian.

Also living with her are three brothers and a sister, Patrick, Leo Thomas, James C., and Miss Saran McKee. Besides them, he is survived by his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Thomas McKee of Sharon, Pa.

The body was taken to the Robert Pumphrey funeral home, 755 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda. Funeral services will take place at 10 a. m., Monday, at Our Lady of Lourdes Catholic Church, Bethesda. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Boy, 9, Hurt by Truck Improving in Hospital

Nine-year-old Robert Roy Redding, a student at Arlington's Charles Stewart School, was in satisfactory condition last night at Arlington Hospital, despite severe internal injuries suffered in an auto accident Thursday.

Redding

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Redding, 6211 Lee hwy., Arlington. Redding is executive secretary of the Committee on Acronautics of the Research and Development Board.

According to police the boy was injured about 4:30 p. m. Thursday as he crossed Lee hwy. with a green light. A truck, driven by James P. Broyhill, 17, of 1805 N. Kentucky rd., Arlington, failed to stop at the red light because of defective foot brakes, police said.

Nurse Service Elects Alexandria Attorney

Other officers selected by the group's board of directors include: Mrs. J. B. Collins, vice president; Mrs. William Moor Kabler, secretary; and Beverly Turner, treasurer. Turner was also reelected to the board. New members of the board are Mrs. Clarence Leadbeater, R. W. Garner and Jack Gordon Maize.

Third Plane Figured in Crash Killing 55 Here

identities of planes ahead of them except in bad weather .

The B-25 was piloted by Lieut. Ray H. Deem, jr., 29, of 16 Galveston pl. sw., according to Bolling base. Deem, it was stated at the base, signalled the National tower for permission to make the simulated landing and was cleared by the tower.

It was understod that an order banning the making of simulated landings over the busy commercial airport had been issued by Col. Sidney D. Grubbs, Bolling commandant, within the last 30 days.

Instructions Not Recorded

Bolling said that there were two passengers in the plane, Capt. Stephen R. Wheaton, 27, 1000 Mississippi ave. se., and Lieut. Col. J. E. Brady, stationed in Maryland. Deem has 231 combat missions in the China-Burma-India theater to his credit.

No recording of tower instructions to the three airplanes is available, according to the CAA.

CAA said the tower since July 1 has discontinued making recordings in good flying weather. Flying weather was nearly perfect at the time of the crash.

Bolling Records Checked

It is understood that the officials probing the crash are checking the records of the Bolling tower as well as the National tower.

It was believed that the B-25 made its simulated landing over the same runway which Bridoux and the airliner were planning to use.

One source stated that the runway in question was Runway 36. It was understood that one of the final warning instructions given the Bolivian was to "make a 360 to the left." Two questions are asked: (1) Did the Bolivian pilot interpret this as an order to land on Runway 36? and (2) did he interpret the order as an instruction to him or to some other plane?

Public hearing on the crash are scheduled to open at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday in Hearing Room B, Inter-Departmental Auditorium, Constitution ave. between 12th and 14th sts. nw.

A five-man inquiry panel, composed of top Civil Aeronautics Board officials, will hear testimony and conduct cross-examination, CAB announced last night. The hearing is expected to take two days to complete.

A question-and-answer statement obtained from Bridoux will be read into the record by the panel.

Bridoux, sole survivor of the worst air collision in history, gave the statement Tuesday afternoon to CAB officials at Alexandria Hospital. He was reported last night "much improved" and has been removed from the critical list, his physician said.

Presiding officer of the inquiry panel will be Robert W. Chrisp, chief of CAB's hearing and reports division. Other members are: Harold A. Jones, CAB member; William K. Andrews, director of the Bureau of Safety Investigations; Ervin N. Townsend, chief of the Accident Investigation Division, and Joseph O. Fluet, chief of Region I and senior investigator at the scene of the crash.

Recovery of the body of William Smythe, 38, Long Island, N. Y., secretary of the Eberhard Faber Pencil Co. and the Eberhard Rubber Co. about 9:30 a. m. yesterday concluded the grim task of searching for victims.

Smythe's body was recovered by harbor police. They reported, also, finding his open-face watch. Its hands were stopped at 11:48 o'clock, police said.

Another phase of the investigation into the crash began yesterday with raising of sections of the fighter plane from the Potomac.

Search for Clews to Cause

Navy divers and crane operators hauled the cockpit, tail assembly and one of the two booms that carried engines and tail surfaces to a barge. CAB investigators immediately photographed every inch of the sections. A check was started to find clews which might explain the cause of the accident.

A spokesman said the position of radio dial settings, especially the dial showing the frequency, may show whether Bridoux was tuned to National Airport controllers. The impact could have changed the setting, however, it was said.

Investigators also will query Bridoux at Alexandria Hospital again, according to the spokesman. The fighter pilot's statement last Tuesday has not been made public, and the press has been unable to interview him.

Bolivian Envoy Only Visitor

Only visitor permitted to see Bridoux yesterday was his close friend Guillermo Guiterrez, Bolivian ambassador to the Organization of American States.

Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) yesterday branded the crash an "inexcusable, unwarranted and unnecessary murder." He wrote chairmen of the CAB and CAA urging new regulations banning military and private aircraft from the flight course of commercial airliners in all major airports.

Representing the Policemen's Association, Corpl. Charles L. Wright and Pvt. Royce Givens will attend the funeral in Salem, Mass., at 10 a. m. today of Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.), who was killed in the crash.

Fire Department Lieut. A. E. Davis, of Engine 6, will attend in behalf of the Firemen's Association. Representative Bates was a member of the House District Committee.

Most Chinese Die Before 30, U. N. Unit Told

Lake Success, Nov. 4 (NYHT).—A surgeon, back from Communist China, reported today that most Chinese die before they reach the age of 30.

Dr. Leo Eloesser of San Francisco told the story to the 26-nation executive board of the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund, which sent him to the Communist areas more than a year ago.

The thing to do, he said, is to teach preventive medicine to one 18-year-old Chinese youth so he can go out and teach others.

Dr. Eloesser said "an average westerner may expect to live about 60 years; an average Chinese may expect to die between 20 and 30, nearer 20 than 30." Communicable diseases and infant mortality cause that toll, and both can be prevented, chiefly, he said, through "a matter of cleanliness."

Tax Dodgers

Last year the District received only 105,000 income-tax returns, and unofficial estimates indicate that about 75,000 persons dodged this local imposition. By rounding up this army of tax evaders a considerable amount of greatly needed revenue can be obtained. With that purpose in view, employers are being required to fill out forms similar to those required by the Federal Government listing the names of employes who received more than $1000 in 1949.

Inasmuch as the authority to require such returns was conferred under the Revenue Act of 1947, it is hard to understand why the hard-pressed District authorities have waited so long to tighten the loopholes for tax evasion, particularly since information is given to the District by the Federal Government for purposes of checking the returns of Government employes.

The suppression of tax dodging is important not only because it uncovers sources of revenue but also because it helps to relieve the tax burdens of law-abiding citizens who need no prodding or checking at source to compel them to pay. The mere knowledge that large numbers of individuals are eluding the tax collector also encourages others to follow their example. While information provided by employers will not uncover all the income that now evades taxation, it will doubtless close most of the escape loopholes. Moreover, the extra clerical work will not be onerous, since basic tax exemptions will be raised to $4000 next year, greatly reducing the number of returns required from employers.

Denfeld's Post

The order breaking up Operation 23, the outfit in the Navy which was the staff headquarters in the struggle against unification, was a necessary first step in the Sherman regime. Some of the stories emanating from this source were weird and fanciful. With the group disbanded, the members of it may now be able to report for more nautical duty. The cabal, however, cannot be so easily liquidated. It is said that the admirals still are breathing fire and brimstone, and are sustained by the knowledge that they have mobilized Admiral Denfeld in the role of leader. They doubtless want him to stay in the Navy and keep it up.

A great responsibility is thus put upon the admiral. It is the kind of responsibility that, assuming he doesn't want to quit, involves a choice—whether to stay in the Navy as a griper and an intriguer, or whether to accept a new command and do his duty. For he has been offered the post as commander in chief of the U. S. Naval Forces, Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean. Having been given an extended leave, he will have plenty of opportunity, removed from lionizing, for reflection.

The plain fact is that Admiral Denfeld is out of character as a rebel. He has hitherto been known as a fine patriot, a hard worker with a zeal for duty and a habit of getting along with his fellows, and a modest man with a disdain for laurels. That is what he still is intrinsically. So, if he decides to take up his new task with the idea that he can maintain the vain struggle on which he has been launched, he will be untrue to himself, and by that token untrue to everybody else.

Television And U. N.

Telecasting the daily sessions of the U. N. General Assembly will be at once a most valuable public service and a triumph for the fledgling television industry. Men and women in distant places will be able to see and hear, very much as though they were physically present at Lake Success, the deliberations of their delegates in what is now the great forum of the world. Thus they will be brought into more intimate relationship with the U. N. and afforded some sense of the participation indispensable to operation of the democratic process.

A great deal of credit is due the individuals whose imagination and enterprise conceived this arrangement—Frank Stanton, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, and Henry Ford 2d, president of the Ford Motor Co. The arrangement would not have been possible without commercial sponsorship. The Ford company will provide this sponsorship without any advertising matter beyond a simple announcement that it is bearing the cost as a public service. CBS will produce and televise the proceedings at Lake Success and make recordings available to television stations in other countries without cost.

Here is a real demonstration of television's potentialities. Its utility as a medium of entertainment is already established. But if the public wants to use it also for more serious purposes, it can do so by manifesting the kind of interest that will warrant underwriting the considerable costs of this kind of program. A real challenge is presented to schools and to adult groups concerned with the capabilities of television as an educational tool. We hope they will find ways to make extensive use of the opportunity now offered them. If they do, television can make a tremendously important contribution to contemporary life.

The Great Wall

Admission to the United States is, of course, a privilege. Entry may be denied to any alien by this or any sovereign nation for any reason, or for no reason at all. But when it is denied, as it appears to have been in several recent instances here, on wholly capricious or at any rate trivial grounds, the effect is less to protect the United States from danger than to expose it to ridicule. Exclusion of idiots, known criminals, immoral persons and the like is mandatory under the immigration law and dictated by common sense. Exclusion of anyone believed to be an undercover agent of a foreign government, seeking to injure the United States by espionage or sabotage, is equally warranted, of course.

Exclusion on grounds of political opinion is a good deal more dubious, however. The law forbids admission to "any alien who, at any time, shall be or shall have been" an anarchist, an opposer of organized government, an advocate of violent overthrow of government or affiliated in any way with an organization advocating such overthrow. In current application, this means anyone who has ever been a Communist; and it is used very often to bar socialists or persons who have merely spoken critically of capitalism. Recent instances in point are the cases of Prof. Glen Shortliffe, a member of a moderate left-wing Canadian political party who was kept for four months from a teaching post at Washington University and was at last declared admissible earlier this week; and Dr. Ian Cameron, an Edinburgh physician whose principal offense appears to be that his sister is secretary of the Socialist Medical Association.

An applicant for entry to the United States must surmount a double wall. First he must obtain a visa from an American consul who is required, under wartime visa regulations, to refuse it if he "knows or has reason to believe" that a person is inadmissible under any provision of law. Consuls are understandably reluctant to take any chances, and the sole appeal from an adverse decision on their part is for a special dispensation by the Attorney General. A visa once granted by a consul may be rejected by an immigration inspector at the border or at a port of entry. The rejection may be appealed to a board of inquiry; but at best this entails humiliating and frustrating delay and seems to many a futile recourse.

If Senator McCarran's pending amendments to the immigration law are adopted, the American border will be even more rigidly sealed. He would authorize rejection even of official visas; that is, of visas granted to official emissaries of foreign governments. We believe that the need today is rather for liberalization of entry conditions, for integration of clearance procedure by consuls and immigration inspectors and for an appeals board set up outside the State and Justice Departments to weigh the equities in cases where exclusion is recommended. We believe that it is neither necessary nor prudent to keep life in the United States concealed from foreign observation.

Communist Bail

The decision by a United States Court of Appeals releasing on reasonable bail the 11 Communist leaders convicted of conspiracy in New York seems to us a matter of elementary justice. Judge Medina denied bail when he passed sentence upon them. Before the Court of Appeals, the prosecution asked that bail be fixed at $100,000 for each of seven defendants and at $75,000 for each of the remaining four. It is unlikely that they could have raised sums totaling a million dollars. The Court of Appeals, reversing Judge Medina's denial, set bail at $30,000 each for four, $20,000 each for the other seven. These are stiff assessments; but they seem warranted as deterrents to flight in view of the defendants' unsavory records.

A substantial question of constitutionality, decided by Judge Medina, remains to be weighed by the Court of Appeals and probably by the Supreme Court as well. "I find as a matter of law," Judge Medina charged the jury, "that there is sufficient danger of a substantive evil that the Congress has a right to prevent to justify the application of the statute under the First Amendment of the Constitution." No doubt the defense will contest this ruling on appeal, urging that the conspiracy to teach and advocate violent overthrow of the Government of which the Communists were found guilty lies within the protection of the First Amendment's free speech guarantee.

The prosecution acknowledged to the Court of Appeals that "the one question which in the view of the Attorney General presents a serious matter is the question of First Amendment rights." And Judge Learned Hand, presiding, observed that "as I understand it there is a doubt as to whether the agitation was itself criminal." With this doubt still to be adjudicated, imprisonment of the convicted men would have amounted to sheer vindictiveness. Whatever may be the crime and the character of these men, their rights under the law must be respected. It will be time enough to put them in prison if, after the judicial process has been fulfilled, they are adjudged to have been properly convicted of acts which the Congress was genuinely warranted in making criminal.

Senator Bridges' Reply

In reply to a suit brought by a former miner against the trustees of the UMW pension fund, Ezra Van Horn, the operators' representative on the three-man board, claimed that the other trustees had for all practical purposes denied him any part in administering the fund and had declined to make an audit such as he demanded. Mr. Van Horn also stated that he had information leading him to believe that large sums of money had gone to persons not entitled to them. Dubbing these charges "ridiculous" and untrue," Senator Bridges, the neutral member of the fund, vigorously denies that he has either individually or in conjunction with any other persons authorized the use of the fund's assets for any purposes other than those for which it was created. He has also been advised that an audit of the kind requested by Mr. Van Horn would have required the services of a very large staff for at least six months. However, if the annual audit does not accord with the requirements of the coal wage agreements or the provisions of the Taft-Hartley law or the general requirements of trust accounting Mr. Bridges intends to ask for such an audit at the earliest possible date. In conclusion, he states emphatically that he welcomes a complete investigation by the court of his acts and conduct as a neutral trustee.

We have criticized both Mr. Bridges and Mr. Van Horn for accepting salaried posts as fund trustees because such appointments put them in the position of trying to serve two masters whose interests often conflict. We have also pointed out that the UMW pension system is actuarially unsound, and for that reason alone believe that Messrs. Bridges and Van Horn were culpably negligent in holding on to their high-salaried jobs while fund resources were shrinking rapidly and bankruptcy was approaching. Mr. Bridges' disavowal of unauthorized dissipation of funds is, of course, no answer to criticisms of this sort. As a matter of fact, we have rather taken for granted that the trustees would not intentionally authorize payments from the fund that could not be defended as a valid exercise of discretionary powers of control. So far as we are concerned, the chief value of an airing in court of charges brought against the fund trustees lies in the opportunity afforded for disclosing the inherent defects in the setup and administration of the UMW pension funds.

Misquoted

It is a pleasant duty to report that an editorial, "Senator Taft Agrees," was based on an A. P. news report, that, the Senator says inaccurately stated he was opposed to immediate use of the Taft-Hartley Act to end the steel and coal strikes. In response to a question asking whether he favored immediate invocation of the injunctive provisions of the law, his reply was that, since he did not possess full information on conditions, he was not in a position to say. That, too, was an ultracautious statement that would have given rise to a suspicion that Mr. Taft was "thinking more about the effect on the 1950 elections of invoking the emergency provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act than about the peril to national health or safety of permitting the coal and steel strikes to drag along."

However, subsequent to the appearance of our editorial, Mr. Taft dissipated our suspicion that he was playing politics at the expense of his convictions by saying: "While I have not full access to all the sources of information, it certainly looks as if the coal strike has reached a point where it threatens the health of the people of the United States. As it reaches that point, the President's duty to make use of the Taft-Hartley law seems to me to be clear." This forthright utterance convinces us that Mr. Taft's reputation for courage and intellectual integrity is well deserved.

New Health Officer

The chief question that arises today with respect to Washington's greatly improved health record is whether or not the gains can be maintained and extended. Dr. George C. Ruhland's final report, which follows his retirement, shows that the District's death rate last year was the lowest in its history, dropping to 9.4 per 1000 population. The remarkable drop in the death rate here during the last decade, as we have previously noted, coincides with the inauguration of improved public health services under Dr. Ruhland's direction. Continuation of this good work now that Dr. Ruhland has gone into retirement will mean the saving of many thousands of lives during the next decade—to say nothing of reducing the losses and suffering from sickness.

A commendable procedure has been followed by the District Commissioners in seeking a successor to Dr. Ruhland. Some months ago the Commissioners named an advisory committee headed by Dr. J. O. Dean of the United States Public Health Service to suggest three men of eminent qualifications to be health officer. Among those recommended was Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, who for many years has been Dr. Ruhland's assistant. The selection of Dr. Seckinger is testimony to Dr. Seckinger personally and to Dr. Ruhland. It is the best assurance we can think of that the excellent record which has been established will be maintained.

Nonatomic Weapons

"There can be no real security, then, save through effective international control of atomic energy. President Truman expressed his own sense of urgency on this score in his appeal to the Russians for fresh consideration of the American control proposal at the U. N. cornerstone-laying ceremonies on Monday in New York. But every rational approach to control should be resolutely explored. Even a measure of control that falls short of the ideal may serve to relieve a mounting tension that can end only in general annihilation."

One can agree easily with the above statement which appeared in your October 26 editorial, "Atomic Rivalry." Most people believe that the control of atomic energy for peaceful purposes is closely related to the prevention of war. But, unfortunately, there is reason to doubt that solution of the problems surrounding atomic energy control would be adequate for giving us any sense of security.

The concentration of attention on atomic control disagreements has blinded many people to the dangers inherent in the possession of other modern weapons of mass destruction. One does not hear of consideration at the U. N. of proposals for the prohibition of the type of bombs which destroyed so much of Europe and Asia before the atomic bombs were used. These bombs, and also bacteriological and chemical weapons, might destroy us quite as effectively as could atomic bombs.

The disarmament which would give us a sense of security would prohibit all weapons of mass destruction to national armaments. And, since modern war in the name of police action might not be any sweeter than any other war, the disarmament we need should also prohibit the use or possession of these modern weapons of mass destruction to the proposed international control body of the U. N.

The General Assembly of the United Nations is now in session. This is, therefore, an especially auspicious time for the presentation of new plans for disarmament and for the sort of international inspection and cooperation which would make disarmament plans effective. We should, therefore, urge our Government to take the initiative in presenting new approaches to the problems surrounding disarmament in order that comprehensive and universal disarmament under international control may bring to us the sense of security we need for building a sane and healthy world economy.

Denfeld's Ouster

The Chief Executive did not hesitate to concur in the insultingly blunt dismissal of Admiral Denfeld, whose 37 years of distinguished professional service led him to disagree with the opinions of a raw inexperienced civilian Secretary. But the country is still waiting to see the President show an equal concern for principle—and the country's good name — in the Vaughan case.

ABBA WILLARD BOWEN.
Bethesda.

Your October 28 editorial, "A Blunt Choice," raises an interesting issue. You write "If the recommendation (by Secretary Matthews for the transfer of Admiral Denfeld) had not been accepted, the President would certainly have been without a Secretary of the Navy."

I contend that the President is still without a Secretary of the Navy. Mr. Matthews may more aptly be titled "Undersecretary of Defense for Naval Relations." If a Chief of Naval Operations could be found with the same high attributes as those possessed by Mr. Matthews, Mr. Johnson would have little further trouble with his brand of unification — unless Congress impeded his progress. Perhaps Mr. Johnson can figure out a way to fire Congress.

Alexandria Protest

I am writing to protest the headline in your October 28 issue in which you proclaimed "Housebreaking Laid to Alexandria Gang."

I have noticed and frequently commented on the fact that if a great or heroic deed is done by an Alexandrian, the Washington papers refer to him (or her) as "a Washington area man (or woman)." But let crime be committed here and you shout that it was done by an Alexandrian —not by a Washington area person. If that is a true fact, then we cannot protest, much as we might like to.

In the present case, however, the housebreakers were a gang of Washington hoodlums and juvenile delinquents. Alexandria was simply the unfortunate scene of their activities. Why didn't you advertise in large headlines that the man who broke the case was an Alexandrian? Why not give Detective Hawes the credit which is so justly his due?

Alexandria is neither better nor worse than other cities its size. The citizenry is composed of human beings—neither gods nor devils. Therefore, we do occasionally have something unpleasant happen here. But why do the Washington papers have to make us out to be so much worse than we are? Why, when a Washington gang commits a crime in Alexandria, does Alexandria have to take the blame?

Dr. Cooke's Appeal

It is supposed that the old theory of the divine right of kings disappeared in 1918 with the collapse of the German empire. However, the action of the Board of Education and the statement by the president of Miner Teachers College in reference to Dr. Paul Cooke make me wonder.

(Editor's Note: Dr. Cooke was rebuked by the president of Miner Teachers College for going over his head to the Board of Education in an appeal for a promotion.)

As a member of Local 27, American Federation of Teachers, I know that Dr. Cooke has fought for the democratic way of life. Until our officials are imbued with the spirit of democracy, we will have more situations like that of Dr. Cooke —a voice crying out in the wilderness.

TEACHER.

In a democracy the right to freedom of speech and the right to appeal belong to every citizen.

It is with a great deal of pride that I salute a man of Dr. Paul Cooke's integrity, who has the courage to insist upon his democratic rights.

"Radio In Transit"

Referring to your October 29 editorial "Radio In Transit," permit me to suggest that beside the two factors there discussed—the annoyance to passengers and the danger from accident—there is still another important phase of the matter in dispute to be considered. Radio in transit represents an usurpation of authority on the part of the traction company.

Under our laws a corporation may engage only in that kind of business for which it has been chartered. The Capital Transit Co. is chartered to carry on the business of transportation; it has no right to pursue any other business no matter how laudable; it is not authorized to buy and sell eggs, speculate in cotton, adopt orphaned children, build homes for veterans. Nor has it any right to radio broadcasting from its vehicles. Technically speaking, radio in transit is "ultra vires"—beyond the competence of the traction company.

Army-Notre Dame

We think its about time that your Mr. Shirley Povich, who prepares a column on sporting events, should be put on the right track about Notre Dame's football relations with the Navy and the Army—particularly the Army. His inference in your October 27 paper that Army is afraid to play Notre Dame is as insulting as it is false.

Mr. Povich's continued moaning that Army doesn't play the tough teams falls a little flat when note is taken of the current national college football rankings. As we look at these rankings, we note that Army has on its schedule Michigan and Pennsylvania, which are listed among the top 10 of the country, not to mention Navy, which is always tough against Army. And how many of these top 10 appear on Notre Dame's schedule?

The Army team is just a bunch of boys who train less hours per week than the great majority of the college teams in the country; they aren't afraid of anybody and they play good enough football to be rated first or second among the colleges of the Nation.

If Army were to play Notre Dame each year, that game would of necessity become its objective game, since Notre Dame would probably be the toughest team on the schedule, year in and year out. In so doing there would be a natural tendency to place less emphasis and importance on the Navy game.

TWO ARMY MEN.

Transit Service

The protestations of the transit people, who assert that their especial concern is for the comfort of passengers is open to some question.

Passengers who are crowded in like sardines find they are thrown forcibly about and against one another every time a bus starts or comes to a stop. There are no straps in the roof for passengers to hold on to. Standing in the buses deprives passengers of any opportunity of reading the street signs and they are often carried beyond their destination. It is a notorious fact that drivers, with a few exceptions, do not call the street names in Washington.

Passengers requesting directions or information do not receive courteous or intelligible replies in all too many instances. There seems to be a spirit of resentment by many drivers to inquiries.

Letter To Nehru

MY DEAR Mr. Nehru: As you now conclude your hectic three-week visit in the United States, many of us here wonder what memories, ideas, emotions you are taking back to India. We wonder if you found business as heartless, labor and minorities as downtrodden, people generally as superficial and materialistic, life as much of a Coney Island as you may have expected.

However, no matter what our impact on you, yours on us has been more than you may realize, more than is now apparent. In a world tragically devoid of leaders with the touch of greatness, you have given us a ray of hope. Many of us who saw you, heard you, or read about you got a strong reassuring sense of your wisdom and courage, and above all of your possession of that inner citadel of power that men and women of the East so often take time to build.

We also felt that we were getting a quick revealing foretaste of that interaction of our civilizations that historians tell us is inevitable.

SOME of us were childishly disappointed that you did not promise to play on our side in the world power game. But many others of us recognized that the straight, courageous talk you gave us was good for our ears. We needed to be reminded by a great neutral outsider that we were impairing our strength by the "psychology of blind fear"; that statesmen needed to understand human beings better; that "problems cannot be solved by the headlong, direct approach of butting heads together"; that we should think more of the objective of peace than of war, "even when preparing to meet aggression"; that the only true freedom we can attain is within.

We especially needed to be told that with the world too small to contain both capitalism and communism, the one would survive that could best deliver the goods — including spiritual ones.

However, you probably do not know that more Americans than the news of the day indicates are trying to do something about peace, are trying to increase this Nation's mental stockpiles of human freedom—the most valuable goods it can "deliver" to the world.

In your hurried itinerary of speeches, luncheons, banquets, receptions, you probably could see little of what we call the "real America." No doubt you did catch glimpses of great contrasts in wealth and poverty and of social discrimination against minorities—with both of which you are familiar in India. You probably came up against many of our national weaknesses, one being the driving, confusing, killing pace to which we subject our visitors of importance —and even of unimportance.

LIKE MANY a man of the East who believes that "meditation is the rock from which flow the issues of life," you may go home wondering when and where Americans ever think. You may even wonder how in such a rush and tear surface life we may presume to get the wisdom and inner stability for world leadership.

However, many of the people you didn't see might give you a quieter picture of this Nation. At the colleges you visited you must have sensed that we do have a vigorous life of the mind, that all our time isn't spent at banquets, cocktail parties, parades.

And although you may hear constantly of this Nation's materialism, there is now a great sweep of interest over the country in those intangibles that the East has long emphasized.

You may not know of the "Great Books" reading clubs extending even to remote communities; of the beginning shift of college students from science and technology to the humanities; of the flocking back to school of adults; of the idealistic —and solid—work being done on college campuses, in women's clubs, churches toward "the objective of peace"; of the widespread calls for traveling libraries; of the great response in the labor unions to education extension courses; of the growth and power of the churches; of the prairie fire interest in the understanding of human beings that you urged; of the new research of the role of the emotions in health and behavior that may revolutionize American life.

The basis of some of this was laid long ago in India. In our characteristic American way we are trying to give it practical, outward expression. Out of this we hope will come some of the "spiritual goods" you have told us our American system must deliver.

Lindsay Articles

To the younger generation, Malvina Lindsay's articles express something that we are constantly looking for, hope. Hope of a firm and solid foundation for our world of the future, free from the detrimental forces which, it seems to me, are prevalent in our ever-changing way of life.

She is always bringing out and clarifying the true ideals of our democracy which have become nebulous to the average American, and makes us feel that there is always room for improvement.

A Communication

Council Of Economic Advisers Should Support Its Views

By James E. Murray
United States Senator from Montana

AS THE principal sponsor of the Employment Act of 1946, I have read with deep concern the article about that act and about the Council of Economic Advisers, written by the Rennies in The Washington Post of October 26. This article is so filled with misinformation that it causes my desire to set the record straight on vital matters of policy to overcome my desire not to be drawn into detailed controversy.

1. The article states that the original full employment bill of 1945 had the definite objective of foreseeing and counteracting unemployment, provided for a national production and employment budget to be presented annually by the President, and required public spending where private spending seemed inadequate. The article then states that the Employment Act of 1946 as finally enacted had the heart cut out of it, that it discarded the idea of full employment, that it threw out the production and employment budget, and that it did nothing but create "an innocuous and ill-defined board to be known as the Council of Economic Advisers."

THIS statement is fundamentally incorrect. The Employment Act of 1946 declared the continuing responsibility of the Federal Government to promote maximum employment, production, and purchasing power, which for practical purposes is the same thing as full employment.

It provided that each year, in his Economic Report, the President set forth the levels of employment, production, and purchasing power obtaining in the United States and the amounts required to reach maximum levels. It also required that the Economic Report contain a discussion of current and foreseeable trends in employment, production, and purchasing power; a review of economic conditions and of all the economic programs of the Federal Government; and a program and recommendations for carrying out the policy of the act.

This is even broader than the national employment and production budget contemplated by the original full employment bill; and the policies to be recommended to achieve the goal are even broader than those contained in the original bill. It is true that these policies cannot be made effective without approval by the Congress, but this is essential to our form of government and was equally true of any policies called for under the original full employment bill.

THE Employment Act of 1946 has been commonly recognized to possess great flexibility and scope, and there are no limitations upon what may be accomplished under it except the views of the President, the Congress, and the people. It is as broad and powerful a statute for full employment as could be devised under our form of government. The distinguished publicist, Walter Lippmann, in The Washington Post of December 26, 1946, called the Employment Act of 1946 "one of the most significant enacted by Congress in this century." My distinguished colleague, Senator Ralph E. Flanders, has hailed it as "the most significant administrative implementation of the formulation of public policy since establishment of the Federal budget system a quarter of a century earlier."

2. The article by the Rennies also states that the Employment Act of 1946 was left with nothing but a Council of Economic Advisers whose only clear function was to make an annual report to the President without any hint as to what this report should contain. This statement is categorically incorrect also.

The main duty of the council under the law is to assist and advise the President in the preparation of the President's Economic Report to the Congress (the character of which I have already described); to appraise economic developments and trends; to evaluate the various programs and activities of the Federal Government; and to develop and to recommend to the President national economic policies to avoid economic fluctuations and to maintain employment, production, and purchasing power. It is hard to see how the Congress, under our form of Government, could have given an economic advisory body broader and yet more clearly defined responsibilities without vesting it with legislative or regulatory authority.

(3) THE article by the Rennies then states that the members of the council have had fundamentally different doctrinaire views which could not be reconciled, and which set the council off in all directions. This is incorrect. Those who have studied the three published annual reports of the council, the three economic reviews which the council has submitted to the Congress in its own name, and the six economic reports of the President, have uniformly been impressed by the extraordinary degree of agreement which has been reached among the members of the council both on economic analysis and on policy recommendations. The same has been true, I am informed, of the dozens of monthly and quarterly reports which the council has submitted directly to the President.

The examples which the Rennies use to indicate that at least two of the advisers were "at opposite poles" are particularly ill-chosen. The views ascribed to Chairman Nourse, that businessmen, labor, farmers, and consumers should voluntarily follow "altruistic" economic policies (which means subordinate their short-run selfish interests to the long-run welfare of the whole economy, including themselves), have been in fact held uniformly by all members of the council and have frequently been reflected in reports signed by all three of them.

I CANNOT see how responsible men in their position could have taken a narrower view of their functions, unless they were prepared to neglect the character of our economy and to say that the Government itself should do everything. The statement that Vice Chairman Keyserling is an uncompromising Keynesian who could not bring himself to believe in continuing prosperity, is equally out of line with his sound and repeated affirmation (expressed both singly and in council reports) that our dynamic American economy can and must achieve continuous stability and growth.

There have obviously been some few differences among the members of the council with regard to economic policy and analysis; there would be no point in getting the benefit of the views of three men if two were always prepared automatically to rubber stamp what the third believed. But the significant lesson to be drawn from the three years of the council's work is that men of good will and dedication to public service can arrive at surprisingly broad areas of agreement in the field of national economic policy.

This the council has certainly done. And although the Congress has not adopted all of its recommendations, there is a growing feeling that our economy has benefited tremendously from the quality of its reports and from the acceptance by the business community in large measure of the sound principles contained therein.

(4) THE article by the Rennies also takes the council to task for ranging over so broad a number of problems as social security and the preservation of timber resources. Can anyone now believe, with a giant industry locked in combat on the issue of social security, that this is not a fundamental issue to be dealt with by those charged under law with responsibility for recommending national economic policies? Or can it be said that the conservation of our natural resources is not a basic issue of national economic policy?

(5) The article by the Rennies then advances the criticism that the Employment Act and the council are ineffectual because the council can propose but cannot effectuate its recommendations, and therefore has "no more chance of warding off depression than a rabbit's foot." This criticism seems to me to manifest confused thinking about the structure for our Government.

No persons in the executive branch, be they charged with advice on economic policy or atomic energy policy or social security policy or farm policy, can themselves put these policies into effect unless they are accepted and implemented by the President, the Congress, and the people. But this is no reason for depriving the President, the Congress, or the people of the advantages which may be gained from an institution such as the council, which is constantly studying the problems of the national economy and constantly advancing its best thinking as to how these problems may be solved within our democratic framework.

(6) THE article by the Rennies also advances the criticism that an economic advisory body such as the council should not endeavor publicly to explain or support even those policies which it recommends and which the President accepts and transmits to the Congress, on the ground that this mixes economics and politics. This argument seems to me fundamentally undemocratic in the deepest sense.

Under our form of government, the President turns to various agencies established by law to assist him in the development of national policies, and it is the President alone who can decide whether he wants to adopt these policies and transmit them to the Congress for consideration. But I have never heard the point made, in connection with foreign policy or domestic policy prior to the establishment of the council, that our Government could function effectively or in the manner to which our traditions have accustomed us if those who under established law advise the President in various fields shrink from the task of discussing with the Congress and with the people those policies which they have recommended and which the President has adopted.

FOR the council to take such an unusual course of quietude would not be separating economics from politics, but on the contrary would be branding the President's economic program as purely "political" by asserting that economists in the public service should have nothing to do with it after it is announced. Such a course would lower, not elevate, the great purposes of the Employment Act as a living thing.

We cannot lift government above "politics" in the mean and distorted sense of that term by having public servants reject the responsibilities inherent in the kind of political system under which we live. An economic adviser to the President who is a man of integrity finds his problem no more difficult than that of any other man of integrity in any other branch of public service who advises the President; if the President repudiates his advice beyond the point of toleration, he is always free to resign. But while retaining his position, he should fulfill its obligations.

AS A matter of fact, aside from theory, the members of the Council of Economic Advisers should act as contemplated under the statute which created them, and should not be censured or ridiculed for so doing. To the best of my knowledge, every original sponsor of the Employment Act of 1946 contemplated that the members of the council, like other public officials, would assume that degree of trusteeship for programs which the President sent to the Congress with their advice as is assumed by other agencies of Government entrusted with specified functions under law.

Presumably, members of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report must have held this same view, because I am informed that on several occasions the committee unanimously invited members of the council to appear before it and no member ever appeared without such invitation. Who is better qualified to construe the intent of the law than those who wrote it?

THE IDEA of men with a "passion for anonymity" has valid applicability to the immediate personal staff of the President, who advise him in a range of matters the content of which is unknown to the public. But officials of a permanent public agency, whose qualifications and duties are set forth in the statute under which they serve, who are confirmed by the Senate, and who under law work in a designated field and assist the President in sending to the Congress messages in that very field stand forth openly in the public eye. They cannot exercise a "passion for anonymity" without being placed in a constantly compromising position, and without shirking their most basic responsibilities in the American traditions.

The members of the Council of Economic Advisers are not "anonymous" and should not be shrouded in that pretense.

The Rennies seem to be singularly inconsistent. They deplore the fact that the council cannot alone effectuate its recommendations; and then they want the council to refrain from trying to be effective by supporting its recommendations.

I have written the foregoing because I believe that the Employment Act of 1946 and the Council of Economic Advisers have already served a great purpose, and can render even greater service in the future as time and experience improve their methods of operation. But it is essential that the public be correctly informed in order that it may better understand one of our most important national undertakings.

Washington.

At Convention

CIO Ousts Communist From Post

Cleveland, Nov. 4 (AP).—The CIO today ousted one admitted Communist, Ben Gold, from its executive board and refused to seat on the board nine other union leaders whose "eligibility" was questioned.

President Philip Murray and other right wing officers all were reelected by acclamation as the CIO convention closed.

The right of the nine left wing unionists to serve under a newly enacted constitutional amendment barring Communists from the executive board will be decided by the board itself, possibly at a meeting tomorrow.

The unions they represent face expulsion from the CIO for violating CIO policies and programs. Among those whom the convention refused to approve for the board today were Longshoreman Harry Bridges, President Abram Flaxer of the United Public Workers, and President Donald Henderson of the Food and Tobacco Workers.

The others were James E. Durkin of the United Office and Professional Workers, Joseph Selly of the American Communications Association, Morris Pizer of the United Furniture Workers, Joseph Jurich of the Fishermen's Union, See CIO, age 7, Column 4.

John Clark of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and Hugh Bryson of the Marine Cooks and Stewards.

President Ben Gold of the Fur and Leather Workers, a Communist Party leader, was ruled ineligible to keep his executive board post under the non-Communist amendment adopted Tuesday.

The CIO presidency previously held by President Albert J. Fitzgerald of the expelled left-wing United Electrical Workers was voted to President Joseph A. Beirne of the Communications Workers of America.

Gold was nominated by a member of his union's delegation. But Murray simply ruled that "under the constitution of the CIO, Brother Gold is ineligible to serve on the executive board."

The procedure for refusing to seat the other nine followed a pattern.

Durkin was the first of them nominated. Secretary-Treasurer David McDonald of the right-wing steelworkers get the floor and announced, "I have a firm conviction that Brother Durkin is ineligible to serve on the executive board." But he said it would take too much of the convention's time to investigate.

He moved that the matter be referred to the executive board for "appropriate and timely action."

away — for the third consecutive day — at the solid front of the coal operators. He sought to make a separate peace with Illinois coal producers by themselves or Illinois and Indiana operators together.

The proposal was rejected promptly by spokesmen for both groups. Both insisted any coal settlement must be made on a national basis.

Lewis made his offer in a reply to a plea for a quick coal peace from Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois. Lewis suggested that Governor Stevenson — and Gov. Henry F. Schriecker of Indiana, who also urged an immediate truce—arrange for a negotiating session in Chicago today.

Lewis predicted that peace terms might be worked out in time for the miners to go back to the pits by Tuesday.

companies and other large manufacturing and power interests within the State of Illinois, which can be made available for public distribution to relieve need under your executive powers."

Meanwhile, the big steel companies still were reluctant to accept the peace formula the CIO Steelworkers worked out Monday with Bethlehem, the Nation's No. 2 steel producer.

Some companies appeared to be willing—if not eager—to go along with the formula, but were studying the matter of cost. Bethlehem agreed to finance $100-a-month pensions (including Social Security) and share the cost of a 5-cent-an-hour social insurance program for it 80,000 employes.

With nearly half a million steelworkers out since October 1, the auto industry in Detroit slowed down production again yesterday. Altogether, some 53,000 auto workers have been laid off. Hardest hit was Chrysler, which closed its Chrysler, Dodge and De Soto assembly lines yesterday and furloughed 35,000 workers.

Ford, however, which had planned to shut down its huge Rouge plant around November 11, yesterday announced it would be able to continue nearly full production in all divisions but Lincoln. The scheduled Ford shutdown would have thrown 100,000 out of work.

Dulles Vs. Lehman

New York Race As A National Portent

THE ELECTION of a Senator in New York State next week is described from the Nation-wide point of view as a "by-election." It conforms to that term, and has to an extraordinary degree the meaning and importance attached to such elections. Yet this New York contest is much more than a by-election.

Sullivan

A by-election is a single election to the House or Senate taking place between the biennial elections in which the whole of the House and a third of the Senate are elected. Always by-elections are interpreted as a sign of a trend in the Nation. Even by-elections to the House are so looked upon, although they take place in single congressional districts. The action of 100,000 or so voters in a small area, and possibly one with special local conditions, is taken as a sign of the state of mind of the 40 to 50 million voters who take part in presidential elections, or in the regular biennial congressional elections which cover the country as a whole.

Yet by-elections have been followed by corresponding results in the ensuing national election on enough occasions to support the theory that they are signs. In any event, belief that by-elections are forecasts is a long American tradition. It accounts for the saying that "As goes Maine, so goes the country," meaning that the election in Maine which takes place in September is a sign of what the country will do in November.

THE SENATORIAL election in New York State next week has extraordinary title to be interpreted as a sign. It takes place in the largest State, having more than a tenth of all the voters in the Nation. In presidential elections the Nation tends strongly to go as New York goes. Out of this arises the interpretation that will be put upon next week's election. Whichever party wins will be encouraged to feel that it will win the presidential election in 1952 and the country-wide congressional elections next year.

Yet an election in which a tenth of the country's whole electorate takes part is more than an ordinary by-election; it is almost a national election of itself. This national aspect of the New York contest is increased by the nature of it. The Democratic aspirant, former Governor Lehman, is seeking to displace a sitting Republican, Senator Dulles. Mr. Lehman is an especially conspicuous supporter of President Truman, and before that of President Roosevelt, and of the policies of both, that is to say, the New Deal. For that reason, victory for him would give President Truman much more encouragement than victory in any ordinary by-election. This is recognized by political leaders of both parties and they have a fairly definite notion of what Mr. Truman's course would be.

MR. TRUMAN would feel that he had won his own presidential election in 1948 by endorsing the New Deal and carrying it further and by his aggressiveness in supporting it. He would now be encouraged to carry the New Deal still further and to repeat his aggressiveness in supporting it. He would feel the same elation he felt over his own 1948 victory. He would press his legislative program upon the present Congress, in its second session next year, with renewed vigor. He would feel that the setbacks he suffered in the present Congress had been rebuked by the voters of the largest State.

Such a course on Mr. Truman's part would have definite political consequences. The members of Congress who in the recent session successfully opposed much of Mr. Truman's legislative program—practically all the Republicans and a sizable number of Democrats—will in many cases be candidates next year for another term. As such they might readily be less disposed to resist Mr. Truman's legislative program again.

It goes without saying that defeat of Mr. Lehman next week would be a serious setback to President Truman. Victory for the Republican candidate, Mr. Dulles, would with justification give elation, hope and determination to the Republicans. They would have reason to hope that they would carry New York State in the presidential election of 1952. On the national basis the Republicans would be strongly encouraged to continue resistance to Mr. Truman's legislative program in Congress. And the Republicans would go forward to the 1952 presidential election with confidence, determination and high morale.

It would be difficult to recall an election in one State having potentiality of as much Nation-wide effect and future effect as the one in New York next week.

New Trustee Of Miners' Fund

CHARLES I. DAWSON

Fairmont, W. Va., Nov. 4 (AP).—A former Louisville, Ky., judge today became the coal operators' representative on the board of trustees of the United Mine Workers welfare and retirement fund.

He is Attorney Charles I. Dawson. He was selected in Nationwide balloting among soft-coal mine owners.

Dawson replaces Ezra Van Horn on the board, which administers the mine workers' pension and welfare fund. The other trustees are United States Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), representing the public, and President John L. Lewis of the UMW for the union.

Van Horn quit September 14, charging Bridges and Lewis were outvoting him on every issue and were dissipating the fund's financial backlog. The fund's trustees then suspended its operation because they said there was not enough money, and the diggers walked out of the pits in protest.

Marshall Sermons To Be Printed

The Washington Post

MRS. PETER MARSHALL
. . . checks sermon proofs

When the Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall died last January, his wife received hundreds of letters from persons all over the nation asking for a book of his sermons.

The result is "Mr. Jones, Meet the Master," 12 sermons delivered by the pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church and chaplain of the United States Senate. It will be published by Fleming H. Revell Co. late in November.

Mrs. Marshall, who had "no idea how much was involved in writing a book," began work on the project in February. Her first job was to select the sermons she wished to include from among more than 500 which her husband left.

Dr. Marshall had evolved his own system for typing his sermons, and Mrs. Marshall and the many friends who became interested in the book believed it should be used, since they felt it conveyed to the reader much of Dr. Marshall's personality.

The clergyman used no indentations for paragraphs, but double spaced after each. Adjectives or phrases, instead of being separated by commas, were printed in stair-step fashion, one below the other. The appearance was similar to blank verse.

After many conferences with Mrs. Marshall, the publishers agreed to use Dr. Marshall's style, though it meant fewer selections could be included.

About half of the sermons are of a pictorial nature, introducing the average man, Mr. Jones, to the Master. The others are based on contemporary problems.

A collection of 10 Scottish sermons and talks by Dr. Marshall was published last week under the auspices of a group of members of the New York Avenue Church. Funds from sale of the book, entitled "The Exile Heart," will be used for a memorial to the former pastor in the new church planned by the congregation.

'Peace of God' Subject Of Heather Sermon

Chaplain Fred H. Heather, associate secretary of the Methodist Commission on Chaplains, will preach on "The Peace of God" at 8 p. m. at Foundry Church (Methodist), 16th and P sts. nw.

At 11 a. m. the Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of the church, will speak on "Christ Chooses You." Immediately after the service he will leave for Trenton, N. J., where he will speak at city-wide Reformation Day services.

New School At Greenbelt To Be Blessed

Patriotic exercises will mark the blessing of the new school and parish hall of St. Hugh's Church, Greenbelt, at 3 p. m. Sunday.

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, will bless the school and an American flag to be presented by the Washington General Assembly, Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus.

Church to Be Built

The Very Rev. Msgr. John S. Spence, director of education for the diocese, will speak at the exercises, which have been arranged by the Rev. Victor J. Dowgiallo, pastor of St. Hugh's.

Until a church is constructed sometime in the next few years, parishoners of St. Hugh's will hear mass in the parish hall. The first mass will be said there at 7:30 a. m. Sunday.

For the past two years, members of the parish have had Sunday services in a motion picture theater.

116 Classrooms in School

Over 200 students will begin classes in the school immediately. It has six classrooms to house first, second, third and fourth grades, only grades now being taught.

St. Hugh's Parish was founded in June, 1947, by Father Dowgiallo. He came here from St. Ambrose's Church, Baltimore.

Sunday CHURCH EVENTS

Dr. Ruth I. Seabury, educational secretary of the American Board of Foreign Missions, will preach at 11 a. m. at Christ Congregational Church, 9525 Colesville rd., Silver Spring, Md., at the second in a month-long series of services dedicating the church.

Dr. Seabury

Dr. Seabury recently returned from Japan, where she helped revise the curriculum of Doshisha University in Kyoto and helped found a coeducational school in the mountain village of Annaka.

One hundred children will be confirmed by the Most Rev. Patrick O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, at 5 p. m. at the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Forest Glen, Md. The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Thomas Lyons of St. Matthew's Cathedral, Washington.

The Rev. Dr. L. Ralph Tabor, pastor, will begin a series of sermons on basic Christian beliefs at 8 p. m. The first sermon is entitled "The Forgiveness of Sins," and will be followed by a question period.

"Le Fils Prodigue, Une Realite d'Aujourd'hui," will be the subject of H. L. Steinschneider's sermon at the French service at 4 p. m. at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square.

A service in Swedish will be conducted at 5 p. m. at Augustana Lutheran Church, New Hampshire ave. and V st. nw. The Rev. Ole Gnospelius of the Church of Sweden, now at the Swedish Seaman's Colony in New York, will be the guest preacher, assisted by the Rev. Clarence T. Nelson, pastor of the church.

1500-Unit Apartment Building Planned

Plans for construction of a 10-million-dollar 1500-unit apartment project on Rockville pike near Georgetown Preparatory School were disclosed yesterday by J. Newton Brewer, jr., Washington investment broker.

Brewer, agent for the heirs of the late Charles I. Corby, wealthy baker, said he has asked the Montgomery County council to rezone 69 acres for the project.

The land, located on the west side of the Rockville pike just north of Grosvenor lane, lies just north of a stretch of land recently recommended for apartment development by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

"We believe that our proposal represents a logical extension of this plan," Brewer said.

The Corby family owns 134 acres and plans to use the 69-acre portion to construct apartments "which will blend with other homes and buildings in the area," he said.

He explained that the land, now wooded and undeveloped, "must be put to use" because of continually rising taxes.

The Corby family has received several requests to sell a portion of the land, Brewer said, but in most cases it would have been used for low-cost individual homes.

No definite plans for the development have been made yet, he said, pending approval by the county council of the rezoning request. If the application is approved, a section at a time will be built until the project is complete.

"We don't plan to put up the apartments overnight," he said, "but we will build as needed."

The land lies about three miles from the site of another projected 10-million-dollar development, approval of which is being sought by Miss Virginia K. Casey, daughter of Eugene B. Casey, former presidential aide. Her petition for rezoning of 46 acres behind the Naval Medical Center near Jones Bridge rd. and Connecticut ave. is now before the county council.

At Pook's Hill, just south of the property, a nine-story, 15-million-dollar 180-unit luxury apartment hotel is under construction.

Truman Mum About Strikes

I hope to see you in the future," he told a crowd of 3000 at Garrett, Ind.

And at Willard, Ohio, he got off a really "nonpolitical" line.

"What do you think of Senator Taft?" shouted a 10-year-old lad.

"I like him very much," Mr. Truman shot back.

The President sharply differs with Taft politically, but has a deep personal respect for him, an aide explained.

But there will be no bipartisan horseplay Saturday night when the President goes on the air from the White House in support of former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York for the Senate and the reelection of Mayor William O'Dwyer.

That will about close Mr. Truman's political activities for this year. No more even veiled "nonpolitical" trips are planned until the 1950 congressional campaign really gets rolling.

Near the end of November Mr. Truman is expected to vacation at Key West, Fla., for about three weeks. There he may get in some licks on his State of the Union message to the second session of his 81st Congress, convening in January.

At St. Paul, Minn., where Mr. Truman slammed away Thursday night, at "reactionaries" opposed to his program, without specifically naming Republicans, the President ripped off the last nonpartisan camouflage veiling this trip.

When his train rolled into the Chicago railroad yards at 6 o'clock this morning, four Illinois Democratic leaders were waiting for him.

They were Senator Paul Douglas, Jake M. Arvey, chairman of the Cook County Democratic Committee; George D. Kells, State Democratic chairman, and former Mayor Edward J. Kelly, Democratic national committeeman.

Democratic National Chairman William M. Boyle, jr., invited them down to have coffee with the President. For 30 minutes they sat and chatted with the President, presumably about 1950 and the campaign to reelect Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas.

A band and the now-familiar "whistle stop" crowd turned out to greet him at Garrett, Ind. Indiana Democratic State Chairman Ira Haymaker and local Democratic dignitaries climbed up on the platform and were photographed with him.

The only thing missing from the rear platform was the 1948 velvet curtain and Mr. Truman's "How Would You Like to Meet My Family?" Mrs. Truman and Margaret did not come along.

At Willard, Ohio, where a crowd of several hundred formed, the 1950 congressional campaign was directly pointed up. Dwight Blackmor, already stumping for the House seat of Representative Alvin Weichel (R., Ohio), shook hands and posed with Mr. Truman.

County Democratic Chairman J. T. Hogsett also climbed aboard and Harlow Staph of the local Chamber of Commerce presented Mr. Truman a bouquet of flowers. Then the President was introduced to C. C. Elias, a local Democratic editor.

The President stood bareheaded in a light falling snow and waved to the crowd.

A reporter asked if he had anything to say about Senator Taft since this was his territory. He said he had no comment. Then 10-year-old Nick Hosler of Willard, standing in the crowd, called out the same question. That was when Mr. Truman said he liked Taft very much. Nick was later held up to shake hands with the President.

A small crowd gathered around the rear platform at Cumberland, Md., but the President did not appear. Miss Roxanna Pawnell, "apple queen" of Hampshire County, W. Va., arrived with a bushel of apples for Mr. Truman. They were loaded aboard the presidential car, and the train moved on.

Pro And Con on Transit Radio

Supporter Calls It a Great New Cure for 'Traffic Nerves'; It's Forcing Music on Captive Audience, Says Opponent

Relaxing Tunes Held Making Commuting More Pleasant Ordeal

(Related story on Page 1)

By Paul H. Bolton

A ride to and from work or shop is a more pleasant ordeal if it is accomplished in a traveling "Carnegie Hall."

Bolton

Many of us pay good money to install a radio set in our personal automobiles, to provide this same relaxation while on long motor trips. It helps to make the trip less wearisome, more pleasant, a treat instead of bad treatment.

So why, tell me, should any of us complain, or advocate pulling these thousands of dollars worth of expensive equipment out of the buses and go back to thumping, bumping, jangling, nerve-wracking noise rides?

I speak on behalf of a great new cure for that latest ill known as "traffic nerves" — soft, soothing and relaxing music, interesting newscasts, informative weather reports, and crisp publicity announcements that point a pleasantly manicured and thrift-directed finger at new products, new automobile models, smart restaurants and the latest movie that I will want to see.

The day Congress adjourned, I left the Capitol feeling a little blue at all the billions that had been spent, and took a streetcar to my office. Happily the car I boarded was equipped with wonderful new F.M. radio broadcast units. Hardly had I gotten seated when music from "South Pacific" was played in soft, soothing tones. It was modulated to just the right volume to cover up the jarring, jangling vibration of the lumbering streetcar trucks over the lumpy tracks. It helped to drown the gruff conversational tone of the man seated in front of me.

By the time I got across town to my offices in the Ring Building, I had been treated to a fine musical concert making the trip seem shorter, more pleasant, and providing a relaxing sedative that caused my stomach ulcers to quiet down and the world to seem really not so bad in spite of the Eighty-first Congress.

As a matter of fact, I ride to work almost every morning on a Chevy Chase Circle bus, and it is a real disappointment if I happen in the 8:30 a. m. rush hour to catch one that is not radio equipped.

So someone wants to read and finds music a distraction? Well, there are two potent answers. First, optical authorities are sounding increasingly eloquent warnings that buses and streetcars are suroces of terrific eyestrain. The lighting is not constant, never can be, because it comes from storage batteries rather than from direct circuits. The vibration is even worse, particularly in the way we pack double the rated capacity of passengers into our conveyances.

New Yorkers travel great distances, from Brooklyn, Long Island, the Bronx, into Manhattan. Typical New Yorkers are expert in manipulating a newspaper in a crowded subway. Washingtonians are inept and clumsy. They invariably try to make a "wingspread" out of a Post; and then get touchy if a neighbor is jostled through the center of their library stance.

At this point I would like to pay a stirring tribute to the genius that chooses the music and guides the programs that make up this fine daily concert. They are soft, soothing, relaxing—yet not too stuffy or too classical. I would like to grasp the hand of the smart fellow that does this important task, because he is largely responsible for candelling out what a few objectors might normally seize upon to stress their gripes.

Now let's square off on this topic of advertising, and see just where there can be any objection. We have sat in streetcars and buses for as far back as our memory can go, reading car cards, never for a moment objecting to a visual display message. Science comes along with electronic genius; saves paper and ink; yes, even spares us the effort of optical strain. We just close our eyes and listen, and at brief, carefully-spaced intervals, exactingly-phrased publicity messages are interspersed with all these other musical treats.

You and I really do not object to having our attention called to today's bargains. In fact, that is why we buy and read today's newspapers. To get this information well presented, with careful diction, by a pleasing voice, is a joy, a commercial advantage, and surely no invasion of any personal rights.

What an age we live in, where these steps toward progress are provided free of all cost; with no effort on our part; in a spirit of service and even with an attribute of thrift, so that while we are enjoying a concert, getting our news, hearing the latest trade gossip, we are automatically putting pennies back in our purses, or at least insuring them against being more generously extracted from our shrinking pocketbooks!

Commercialized Sound Force-Feeding Called Basic Right Violation

(Related story on Page 1)

By R. A. Seelig

The basic objection to transit radio is that it forces itself upon a captive audience. This objection has not once been met head-on in the hearings before the Public Utilities Commission.

Seelig

There has been a smoke screen of testimony about the quality of the programs, the Capital Transit Co.'s need for revenue, the results of various polls and enthusiastic statements about how radios in streetcars might avert disaster if a bomb dropped.

But no one has been willing to get on the witness stand and say: "I believe it is right to force my program into unwilling ears so I can make money."

This is the issue. Do people, even if they are a minority, have any right to choose what they shall hear? Or can a national syndicate, in the name of business, sweep aside their objections and force-feed them with a mixture of commercialized sound?

Much time was occupied at the PUC hearings in an effort to prove radio is a good invention. Opponents of transit broadcasting have been branded as horse-and-buggy thinkers. Installation of transit radio is called "progress."

This is just a dust cloud to obscure the vital moral principle at stake.

Nobody is attacking radio as such. What we object to is having radio rammed into our ears whether we like it or not. The objection would be the same if the streetcar company decided to force us to eat hamburger sandwiches while riding.

Perhaps a majority of riders might be highly pleased to have sandwiches handed out as they come on board, but no doubt some would prefer to select their own food.

Suppose, however, that on the theory the majority rules, everyone boarding a transit vehicle were forced to eat a sandwich. If he didn't, the sandwich would be thrust down his throat. Of course somebody will say: "Oh, but the radio is different." Is it? What is the difference between stuffing sound—by force—into the ears of captive listeners or cramming food into their mouths?

But is a transit rider a captive? The radio engineers so regard him. He has to ride in order to work and live, and so they have him trapped. An article by Fred M. Berry, project engineer of Railway Radiotelephone, Inc., in the August issue of "Communications" magazine speakers of riders in public service vehicles" as a "captured audience" which is "proving very attractive to the advertiser."

It is this feeling of being a chained and frustrated captive to a radio station operator that has so aroused the wrath of many people in the Nation's capital. Advocates of transit radio can't understand why such a storm has been stirred up. They do not comprehend the issue involved, which is as basic as the Bill of Rights.

It is also as basic as the Biblical admonition, "Love thy neighbor as thyself". Transit radio advocates are not charitable when they insist on foisting radio on those who suffer from forced listening.

Note the testimony before the PUC of Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, that forced listening can be so irritating to some normal people that it can damage them physically and mentally.

Is it right that a company be permitted, for money, to damage at least some of the people who ride the buses and streetcars?

On the other hand, is the absence of radio in transit vehicles depriving the majority of any basic right or privilege? The answer obviously is "no", because they are paying only for transportation, not radio. Also, they are at liberty to hear radio in many other places with a receiver under their own control.

In summary, the people who want radio on streetcars and buses are deprived of no basic right if radios are not installed; but the people who oppose radio, if forced to listen, are deprived not only of their right to freedom of choice but some proportion of them suffer actual physical and mental damage.

Either radios should be eliminated altogether from transit vehicles or only every other vehicle should be equipped with it so riders have a choice.

Rents to Jump 20 Percent When Canada Eases Control

Ottawa, Nov. 4 (U.P.).—Many Canadian tenants will pay 25 percent higher rent after December 15 under the Government's relaxed control program announced last night.

Finance Minister Douglas C. Abbott allowed rents to jump 20 to 25 percent. He indicated final restrictions would not be removed until the national housing situation is improved.

Effective December 15, landlords can obtain a 20 percent increase for unheated houses and 25 percent for heated units by giving their tenants a one-year lease.

"This lease must contain a clause permitting the tenant to terminate it at one month's notice. If the tenant refuses the offer, the landlord may require him to vacate and the accommodation then becomes free of federal rent control," Abbott said.

The Finance Minister also announced that, in effect, controls would be lifted where the landlord and tenant could reach agreement on rent.

"Landlords and tenants," he said, "may enter into term certain leases of not less than two years' duration at any rental upon which they may agree."

After December 15 the administrator's approval will not be necessary in such arrangements.

Rents on unfurnished rooms or parts of houses in which the tenant shares toilet facilities can be raised 20 per cent. Landlords were granted the right to terminate leases on rooms with six months notice.

Furnished rooms are not affected

Capital Store Sales Off 3% During Week

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales in the week ended October 29 slipped 3 percent below the year-ago level, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

For the four weeks ended October 29, local dollar volume was reported 5 percent below the same period last year.

The dip here was mild in comparison with other cities in the Fifth Federal Reserve District. Baltimore sales were down 12 percent for the week and 15 percent for the four-week period. The Fifth District as a whole displayed an average sales decline of 8 percent for the week and 10 percent for the four-week period.

The Richmond Reserve Bank also reported yesterday that Washington store sales in September were 5 percent lower than the same 1948 month. However, for the first nine months this year local dollar volume remained 2 percent better than the year-ago figure.

Inventories of D. C. stores on September 30 were estimated 3 percent below last year, while outstanding orders were also down 3 percent.

CONTROL FIGHT: A bitter battle for control of New Hampshire's largest life insurance company is under way. The Shenandoah Life Insurance Co. of Roanoke, Va., has filed suit to force the 20-million-dollar United Life and Accident Insurance Co. of Concord, N. H., to disclose its list of stockholders. The Virginia company, which owns 4128 shares of the United firm, has agreed to sell the shares to Hugh F. Dickson of Atlanta, Ga., and Frank L. McNey of Dallas, Tex. The hitch is that the pair want to buy 8000 additional shares in order to assure control. Shares, not available on securities markets, may be bought only from stockholders of the firm.

NEW ABA HEAD: F. Raymond Peterson, elevated to the presidency of the American Bankers Association, started his banking career in 1914.

Peterson

A native of Kansas, he served in World War I in the Army's finance department. He became a Kansas bank examiner in 1919 and later was a national bank examiner. In 1936, he went to Paterson, N. J., and currently is board chairman of the First National Bank & Trust Co. of Paterson.

MORTGAGES: The rise in real estate loans during the past decade was emphasized at the San Francisco convention of the American Bankers Association. Declared William A. Marcus, president of the ABA's savings and mortgage division: "Currently, banks are employing 31 percent of their savings accounts in real estate loans; savings and loan associations are 94 percent loaned against share accounts, and insurance companies hold 24 percent of their assets in real estate loans. Nearly all the rise in mortgage figures for the period 1940 to 1949 occurred since V-J Day, and half of this increase was due to loans made to veterans under terms of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944."

AFTERMATH: The coal strike cut sharply into the earnings of Eastern railroads during September, The Association of American Railroads said the estimated total net income for all railroads was down that month but the Eastern carriers were hardest hit. The Eastern lines depend heavily on hauling of coal. Their net income for the month was estimated at only $900,000, compared to $5,063,252 in August and 35 million dollars in September a year ago. The net income for all the principal railroads in the country in September was estimated at $38,500,000, less than half of the 83 million dollars reported for the month last year. In the first nine months of 1949, net income was estimated at 278 million dollars. In the same period of 1949, it was 505 million dollars.

ECONOMY IDEA: Not yet in Washington, but department stores in 19 cities have pooled credit plate issuance to cut costs, make downtown shopping easier. Plates are good in all cooperating stores, according to Nation's Business, publication of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

EARNINGS: Celanese Corp. of America reported net income of $10,988,870 or $1.58 a common share for the first nine months this year, compared with $29,792,772 or $4.99 a share in the same 1948 period. Other earnings statements:

Terps Heavy Choice Today Over GW at College Park

George Washington's Colonials, condemned to slaughter by the men who make up the odds, journey to College Park this afternoon to face Maryland in a 2:15 Southern Conference football game.

The Terrapins, the Nation's second ranking defensive team, and stacked deep in reserves, rule as favorites of four to five touchdowns. A crowd of 18,000 is expected.

Outweighed and outnumbered in reserves, the Colonials hope to provide the equalizers in Passer Andy Davis and Runner Al DuGoff. This pair has led G. W. to three straight victories.

It's of little comfort to the Colonials, however, that Davis and DuGoff were stopped cold last year, as the Terps buried them, 47-0.

The record shows that Maryland has an even better club than last season. Only tenth-ranking Michigan State holds a victory over them, that one by 14-7.

Leading the charge of Maryland's forward wall is All-America candidate Ray Krouse, 240-pound tackle.

To Krouse, a former Western High athlete, and Quarterback Joe Tucker, former Central High product, the Terps look for big things today.

Tucker, a senior, is just developing into a polished quarterback as he displayed by passing for two touchdowns in the Terp's rout of South Carolina last week.

He saw little action in last year's game when graduating Quarterback Vic Turyn passed for three touchdowns. End Earl Wingate, who grabbed two of those scoring passes, and Fullback Earl Roth, who snared the third, will be in the line-up today. So will Stan Lavine, who late in last year's game, intercepted a Davis pass and romped 88 yards for a touchdown.

Roth, a 195-pound Wilmington, Del., junior, will get a chance to compare his punting prowess with Johnny Shullenbarger, G. W.'s punting pride. Roth ranks fourteenth in the Nation. Shullenbarger showed his stuff by averaging 37.5 yards in 22 boots against Lafayette last week.

This is the eleventh meeting between Maryland and G.W. in their series which dates back to 1897. Maryland has won five times, and G.W. twice. Three games ended in scoreless ties.

Caps Face Bombing Tonight From Ed MacAuley and Co.

The prospect of being "bombed out" before their National Basketball Association season is a week old faces the Washington Caps tonight as they take on the Bombers of St. Louis in an 8:30 argument at Uline Arena.

Winners by a squeaky 66-61 in their debut Wednesday against Baltimore, the Caps will be opposing what is expected to be one of the toughest teams in the league tonight.

The Bombers have two victories under their belts. They romped over the Tri-City Blackhawks, 72-51, and Thursday night hung an 81-65 setback on the same Baltimore Bullets who were barely edged by the Caps. They lost last night to Philadelphia, 79-58.

Members of the Washington club saw and were impressed by the Baltimore game, featured by the first Eastern appearance of "Easy Ed" MacAuley, St. Louis University All-American of the last two seasons.

MacAuley, at 6 feet, 8 inches, is still short of ranking as the Bombers' tallest player. Bill Roberts, another center, is an inch taller and Forward Red Rocha is the same height.

So far St. Louis' top scorer has been Mike Todorovich, an acquisition from last year's Sheboygan Redskins who was named rookie of the year in the National Pro Basketball League. He and Rocha will probably start at forward with MacAuley at center and D. C. Wilcutt and Johnny Logan at the guards.

Tonight's game will mark the first outing for Coach Bob Feerick as a player this season. He held himself out of Wednesday's game but expects to see a lot of action if needed.

His starters, however, will be Chuck Gilmur and John Norlander at forward, Jack Nichols at center, and Freddy Scolari and Chick Reiser at guard.

Unbeaten Virginia Meets Penn

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Nov. 4.—Undefeated Virginia enters the backstretch of its football schedule tomorrow, a decided underdog to be beaten to the wire by once-defeated Pennsylvania.

Hoping to rebound from its last-second 22-21 upset to Pittsburgh last week, the Quakers are a 14½ point favorite

A Franklin Field crowd of 60,000, some 18,000 below capacity, is expected to show up for the fifteenth clash between the Cavaliers and the Quakers. Virginia has yet to win from Penn.

Strangely enough, Penn Coach George Munger is not as concerned over Fullback Johnny Papit, the Nation's leading runner, as he is over the Cavalier defense.

"It hasn't been tested yet, but our scouts report they have the defensive potential," Munger said today

On the other hand, Virginia Coach Art Guepe didn't appear to be too disturbed over Penn's offensive aces—Red Bagnell, Bob Deuber and Ray Dooney, but he was worried over Penn's defense.

"Their line isn't big, but it's fast and powerful and what's more—it's deep, something we aren't."

Miami Rolls Over Detroit By 27 to 6

Miami, Fla., Nov. 4 (AP).—The alert University of Miami Hurricanes smothered the University of Detroit Titans 27 to 6 tonight in the Orange Bowl before 35,031 spectators.

The Hurricanes struck twice in the first quarter, again in the second and scored the final touchdown on a spectacular 65-yard sprint in the final period.

Detroit's line touchdown came in the last 11 seconds of the second period when Mike Maysserian culminated a 17-yard drive by plunging over for a touchdown from the Miami 1.

After the first quarter, during which Miami unleashed several spectacular runs, it appeared the visiting Titans were going to be victims of a rout. Bue the Detroit line buckled down in the second quarter and held the Hurricanes scoreless in the third.

Miami	13	7	0	7	—27
Detroit	0	6	0	0	—6

Touchdowns: Miami—Chwalik, Campbell (2), Brasington. Points after touchdown—Watson (3). Detroit: Touchdown—Kayserian.

St. Vincent Wins

Latrobe, Pa., Nov. 4 (AP).—The St. Vincent Bearcats rolled to a 52-6 win over the West Virginia Wesleyan Bobcats tonight but they aren't too happy about it.

The six points which Chuck Shepherd lugged over from the 3-yard line for the West Virginians were the first scored on the Bearcoats this season.

Unbeaten Army and Fordham Clash Today at West Point

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 5.—Army's "breather" with Fordham has suddenly stacked up as a contest of two unbeaten teams and is expected to cause the Cadets at least a few labored breaths, if not worse, in Michie Stadium tomorrow.

It emerges as the top game in the East, with the surprising Fordhams having gained stature as a team far removed from the push-over class, their rating when they were scheduled by Army after losing six games last season.

Despite the new respect for Fordham, however, the powerful Cadets of Earl Blaik are still rated a three-touchdown favorite, with Ram Coach Ed Danowski dolefully moaning "We're out of our class."

West Point is the scene of the game because of a bad guess by officials of the two schools, who originally scheduled the contest for New York. On the assumption it would be no great gate attraction, and unable to foresee Fordham's rise, they switched the game here where the capacity is only 27,000, compared to Yankee Stadium's 75,000.

Army's coaches are wary of Fordham despite the Rams' protestations that they are overmatched. Coach Blaik's scouts have brought back glowing reports of the passing efficiency of the Rams' Dick Doheny and the ball-toting of Larry Higgins and Stan Bloomer.

Latest of Fordham's triumphs was the 42-0 defeat of Georgetown, brightest spot on the Rams' record which previously had showed only one-sided victories over such lesser powers as Kings Point, Scranton and Syracuse.

Blaik announced that all 55 of his players would suit up for the game and expressed the hope that Army could wear down the Rams. The Cadets have been bolstered for tomorrow's game by the complete recovery of Fullback Gil Stephenson from his leg injury.

Fordam, like Army, has been using the platoon-system and even surpassing Army's wholesale substitution tactics. Danowski has been using different, complete units not only for offense and defense, but for kick-offs and kick-receiving.

The individual duel of the game, if any, apparently will be between the slick-operating Army quarterback, Arnold Galiffa, and Fordham's Doheny whose passes devastated Georgetown.

Sam Snead's 66-274 Wins In North-South

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 4. (AP)—Sammy Snead had his putter working today and romped in a six-stroke winner of the North and South Open Golf Tournament with a rousing 70, 66 finish for 274, 14 under par.

In taking the $1500 first money in this $7500 event, the PGA champion from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., ended up only three strokes off the tournament record set by Ben Hogan seven years ago. His closing barrage, a six under par, 34, 32, was only one stroke off the course record.

Johnny Bulla of Pittsburg, who was second to Snead throughout each of the first three rounds, hung on to finish in the runnerup slot with a 70, 71 windup for 280.

Snead's four rounds were 68, 70, 70, 66. Bulla, always under par with his 69, 70, 70, 71, had to settle for $1000 runnerup money.

Snead sunk a 30-foot putt for a birdie on 14 and had five other putts of from 10 to 15 feet, two of which he needed in order to salvage pars.

National Open Champion Cary Middlecoff playing from Ormond Beach, Fla., who began the day two strokes back of Snead, finished third with 72, 71 for 283.

Middies Underdogs

70,000 See Navy and Tulane Tangle Today at New Orleans

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

New Orleans, Nov. 4.—Navy and Tulane, two members in excellent standing in the Notre Dame-beatus-badly club, clash here in Tulane Stadium tomorrow and near perfect weather is expected to bring out more than 70,000.

Trouble for the gritty Middies is that their 40-0 encounter with the Irish was just last week. Tulane has had three weeks to recover from its 46-7 shellacking and showed signs of being fully revived last week downing Mississippi State 54-6.

Early in the week, Tulane was established a 20-point favorite. Here is the colorful Crescent City they're trying to talk it down to 14 points. At the same time there's speculation that the Green Wave will try a measure of revenge by beating Navy by a bigger score than Notre Dame.

Grim Navy Coach George Sauer wasn't saying much. His boys have dropped all three of their away games. If they lose here tomorrow, it means they've traveled more than 10,000 miles for various losing games.

Sauer did admit that he thought the Wisconsin loss, 48-13, put his Middies off balance and expressed the hope that they could get back on the beam.

Wisconsin's surprise rout ended the Navy two-game winning streak it was able to fashion after going through 15 games without a victory.

The Tars romped over Princeton one-point loser to Penn, and were only two points on the short end to strong Cornell and hit their peak against Duke 28-14.

If they come back to that Duke performance, they can cause trouble for Tulane, expected to be Southeastern Conference champion. Offensive hopes are pinned on passer Bob Zastrow. The brilliant soph quarterback led the Nation after his first three games. Despite the last three one-sided setbacks, big "Z" still is the country's twelfth leading passer and is second in the East.

Has to Explain Safety

Kivus' Homecoming Damper Than Hoyas'

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

THE HOMECOMING celebration at Georgetown University was generally dampened by last night's 29-14 loss to Villanova, but Halfback Jack Kivus' "homecoming" was a little damper than most. When he got home to his Hilltop dormitory room he had some explaining to do to Roommate Mike Pieschel, chairman of the Hoya homecoming committee, about the first period pass interception which he carried into the end zone and fumbled to give Villanova its first two points.

For the first 22 minutes of the game the Wildcats were a point-a-minute club. Their first touchdown and extra point, giving them a 9-0 lead, came after nine minutes of the first quarter. Their second touchdown came on the last play of the period, and when Clavin made the conversion they were ahead, 16-0, with only 15 minutes gone. After 3:53 of the second quarter they notched touchdown No. 3, but with their second team in actiont hey "fell off" badly and wound up short of a ½-point-a-minute record.

Oddsmakers can take a deep bow over the outcome—and at the same time thank Villanova Coach Jim Leonard for his lengthy use of the Wildcat second team. Georgetown was a 14½-point underdog, which is figuring it pretty close.

It was Tommy Hardiman's ninth pass interception of the season which launched Georgetown's first touchdown drive late in the third period. Hardiman took the ball on the goal line and moved to the Georgetown 1-yard line before being dragged back into the end zone. Ninety yards later Mattingly lobbed to Fornaciari from Villanova's nine and the Hoyas had evaded a whitewash.

Speed and shiftiness carried Billy Conn the first 70 yards of his thrilling 87-yard run with a Villanova punt, but it was more determination than anything else that got him up to the Wildcat four. He was hit by Schmitt, coming in from the side, but tore away, and failed to score only because he'd been slowed up enough for Scott to tackle him from behind.

Georgetown, whose band was outnumbered by the Villanova band, also disappointed a few fans by failing to present a Homecoming Queen. She'll be selected tonight, however, when the Homecoming Ball is staged at the Statler.

Gerry Coleman Top A. L. Rookie

New York, Nov. 4. (AP).—Gerald Coleman, graceful second baseman of the New York Yankees, is the top rookie in the American League.

The 25-year-old San Franciscan was the pick of 40 of the 116 baseball experts who voted in the Associated Press poll to win out in a three-cornered battle with Roy Sievers of the St. Louis Browns, and Alex Kellner of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Sievers, the .306 hitting outfielder who banged out 16 home runs in his first year in the majors, drew 33 votes to nose out Kellner for second place. The A's southpaw star, who won 20 and lost 12, was named on 30 ballots.

Hoya Harriers Whip Virginia

Georgetown's varsity and freshman defeated Virginia in two cross-country meets at Georgetown. Varsity score was, 16-46, and freshman score, 15-45.

Jim Rams, Joe Deady, Dave Smith and Pat O'Brien finished in a dead heat for first for the Hoya varsity. Carl Joyce and Joe LaPierre tied for first for Georgetown's freshmen.

West Awarded Decision Over Alfredo Prada

Washington's Sonny Boy West, scored a ten round split decision over Alfredo Prada last night at Uline's Arena.

West, local lightweight ranked fifth nationally, got off to his usual fast start but weakened in the late going under the body attack administered by the newest "Wild Bull of the Pampas."

Prada had West hanging on the ropes in the eighth and ninth rounds on the verge of a K. O. but he couldn't put Sonny Boy away.

Referee Charlie Reynolds and Judge Joseph Kilmartin voted for West while Judge Harry Childs cast his ballot for Prada.

A crowd of 1260 paid a gross of $2246.50 for a net $1634 to see Goldie Ahearn's first indoor show of the season.

New York Middleweight Richie Dallas, snapped Julian Keene's winning streak at 13 straight on a TKO in the third round when Ring Physician Leon S. Gordon refused to let the Washington boy come out for the third.

In the second round Keene looked as if he had Dallas but the New Yorker came back strong

Sam Kelsey, Washington lightweight, easily decisioned Maurice Nelson of Baltimore, in the opening four-round preliminary; Billy Coffield, Baltimore middleweight, outpointed Miles Jones, a local boy, and Tex Newby of Baltimore, won a split decision over Washington middleweight, John Pratt, in four rounders.

Conn Runs 87 Yards, Mattingly Sneaks Over

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Villanova's king-sized Wildcats landed on Georgetown for three touchdowns and a safety in the first half last night and the flattened Hilltoppers didn't quite recover.

Though Frank Mattingly passed them to one touchdown and Billy Conn set up another with an 87-yard run in the last quarter, the Hoyas had to settle for a 29-14 defeat at Griffith Stadium before 11,071.

The Wildcats sprang three tremendous backs in 210-pound Pete D'Alonzo, 195-pound Steve Romanik and 225-pound Ralph Pasquariello, and the Hoyas, still battered from a 42-0 pasting by Fordham last week, couldn't quite cope with them.

Another lad whom the Georgetowners had trouble stopping was 185-pound John Geppi, a Baltimore lad, who set up the first two Wildcat scores on long runs, and went over for a third. However, Geppi tore a ligament in his leg early in the third quarter, and the Wildcats had to struggle along without him.

Villanova Clearly Superior

Villanova's superiority was a more lopsided than the score indicates. Once in the first quarter, the Wildcats marched 50 yards to Georgetown's 5 before being stopped. And twice in the third quarter they ground to the Hoya 1 before Tommy Hardiman, a cat on defense, stopped them.

One time, he stopped the massive Pasquariello on fourth down at the goal line and another time he intercepted a Romanik pass on the Hoya 1 to harass Villanova.

Prodded by Geppi, the Wildcats marched 43 yards to Georgetown's 18 the first time they got the ball. There, a Roamnik pass went astray. Hoya safety man, Jack Kivus, back-pedalling toward his end zone, intercepted on his one, and crossed over the goal line. Dan Brown, Villanova's intended receiver, tackled Kivus, who fumbled and officials ruled it a safety for Villanova.

Moments later, Geppi smashed over right guard for 38-yards in the midst of a Villanova 52-yard drive to the Hoya one. Romanik sneaked over from the one, and Tom Clavin converted.

Geppi Goes Over

On the last play of the first quarter, Geppi capped a 43-yard Villanova excursion by slanting through right guard for the last four yards and a touchdown. Again Clavin converted.

Apparently affected by the 43-degree temperature, the stone-cold Hoyas yielded still another touchdown before the first half ended. This came when Villanova's crack end, Al Schmid, recovered Conn's fumble on the Hoya 26, and Pasquariello rammed over from the one. Clavin's placement was blocked by Georgetown Center Bob Keller.

While the Wildcats were rolling up this 22-0 bulge, Georgetown wasn't advancing beyond its 38-yard line. John Sandusky, a 260-pound tackle from Philadelphia was crashing through repeatedly to smother the Hoya running attack.

Mattingly finally took to the air and passed the Hoyas out of their own territory for the first time with 30 seconds left in the third quarter.

He hit Frannie Desmond on a 47-yard pass play to Villanova's 43. Then Gus Fornaciari got into the act, snaring a Mattingly toss and

W-L Routs Western, 34-6; Gilfillan Star

Jack Gilfillan sparked Washington-Lee to a 34-6 win over Western at the W-L Stadium last night before 6000 fans.

Gilfillan scored two touchdowns, the first coming on an 11-yard plunge over right tackle in the first quarter and from the one-foot line in the third period.

Western's lone T. D. came in the second quarter on a 12-yard pass from Dale Larsen to Bill Mushake. Joe Piesinger's conversion was low.

Howard in Homecoming Game

Catholic Meets Gallaudet; Marines Play Patuxent

Catholic University and Gallaudet renew their old football rivalry for the first time since 1931 when they clash at 2:30 p. m. today at Brookland Stadium.

In other games of local interest, the strong Quantico Marines are host to the undefeated Patuxent sailors and Howard University entertains Hampton Institute in a homecoming game. Kickoffs for these two games are set for 2 p. m.

The Brookland game counts in the Mason-Dixon Conference standings. Both teams are striving for their first victory of the season.

Regardless of the outcome, the game should revive some fond memories for C. U. Coach Jan Jankowski. He was quarterback on the last Cardinal team which played the Bisons 18 years ago, and he scored four touchdowns as C. U. rolled up a 91-0 score.

The series which began in 1914 stands at four wins for C. U., two for Gallaudet and one tie.

The only team which both clubs have faced this year is Randolph-Macon. C. U. lost, 9-7, while Gallaudet was routed, 25-0. Gallaudet's three outstanding players are End Truitt Saunders, Guard Frank Turk and Fullback Dick Amundson. Quarterback Joe Dunn and Halfback Bucky Ennis will carry C. U.'s offensive load.

Prize in the Quantico-Patuxent game is the right to represent this area in the All-Navy playoffs which open December 3 at Norfolk. Quantico has held the All-Navy title for three straight seasons, and will be a favorite to win today.

It's of comfort to the sailors today that Quantico's fine passer, Rudy Flores, will be sidelined because of a bad leg. Flores has thrown 10 touchdown passes this season. Prominent on Patuxent's list of victims is Catholic U., 28-0.

Howard, with a 3-3 record, is a 21-point underdog to Hampton, victor in the National Classic three weeks ago. However, Howard will be strengthened by the return of Capt. Otto Jordan, stellar fullback.

The Bisons will bank further on End Hillary Thompson and Halfback Asabel Abrams, both former Cardozo High boys. Thompson has scored six touchdowns and Abrams five this season. Howard has scored 15 TDs altogether.

Trannen Colts' Star in 19-19 Game

By Don Lief

Arnie Tranen and his Coolidge mates put a damper on Anacostia High's title hopes yesterday as the Colts and Indians tied, 19-19, at Anacostia before 2500 spectators.

Needing only nine plays to maneuver Coolidge to its three touchdowns, Tranen ran for a first-period score and threw two long pay-off passes in the second half. He also kicked Coolidge's extra point.

Ed "Bama" Burt, Anacostia's big fullback, accounted for all the Indians' points with three short line bucks for scores and a successful rushing conversion.

The tie dropped Anacostia into second place in the Southern Division as Wilson defeated Roosevelt, 26-0. Anacostia has finished its interhigh schedule while Wilson still has two games to play against weak teams. A double win will clinch Wilson's right to meet the Northern Division leader November 25 for the Interhigh championship.

After Coolidge recovered an Indian fumble on the first play from scrimmage at the 33, Tranen ran to the 11, Bill Horan to the 8, and Tranen scored from there after taking a pitch-out from Dan Richardson. Jim Matthews blocked Tranen's kick.

Anacostia came back to move to the Colt 10 but lost the ball on downs. Later in the first half, however, the Indians took a Colt punt on the 5, and, without throwing a pass, went 95 yards for a score. Burt climaxed the drive with a 3-yard leap off tackle.

All four Colt backs took a crack with the ball at the beginning of the third period. When Tranen's turn came, he uncorked a pass to End Ned Harrison for a 64-yard scoring play. A rushing conversion attempt was short.

Another long scoring drive by Anacostia went for 80 yards and another score. Bob Chatlin and Burt again alternated in the Indians' strong ground attack, as Burt plowed over from the 3 for his second score. He battered his way for a sushing conversion to put Anacostia ahead 13-12.

On the first play after the kickoff, Tranen threw to Bill Horan on the Anacostia 15. Horan outraced two to score. The play covered 58 yards. Tranen kicked the point.

Anacostia tied up the game with two minutes to go as Burt scored from the 1 after another long drive of 70 yards. He failed to make good on his attempt to rush the extra point.

TOUGH TACKLE—Central High School's Pat McDougal is brought down by Eastern's Dominick Adriani and Bob Murray in the first quarter of the game yesterday in Central Stadium. The Vikings beat the Ramblers 7-6. They remain tied with McKinley Tech for the Northern Division lead

Leathery's Kick Beats Ramblers

By West McLean
Post Reporter

Big Lynn Leathery drove the point after touchdown kick squarely between the uprights yesterday to give Central a 7-6 win over Eastern in an interhigh game at Central.

The big tackle who pulls out of the line to try all of Central's conversions made good his eleventh try in 15 attempts this season and broke a 6-6 fourth quarter deadlock to give the Vikings their fourth win in Interhigh competition.

They now have a 4-0-1 record and are tied with McKinley Tech for the Northern Division interhigh lead. Central and Tech clash at Central, November 19.

Last year's All-High end, Franny Gleason paved the way for Leathery's opportunity by recovering Danny Cookman's fumble on the Ramblers' 23.

From that point Jimmy Sullivan, southpaw passer, completed a pass to Terry Gregory for a first down on Eastern's 7. Sullivan faded back again on the next play, found Gleason all alone in the end zone and whipped a pass to him for the touchdown.

Central's running game, weakened by the loss of Jimmy Pantos who transferred to Longwood Prep last week, got a lift from Jerry Murphy and Pat McDougal. However, it was Sullivan's two passes that brought the Vikings the win.

Fumbles led to both teams' scores with Eastern's Arnie Rollman grabbing a bobble by Jerry Murphy on the Vikings' 5 and scoring without a hand laid on him in the third quarter.

John Morris' snapback was wide on the attempted conversion kick and Central recovered the loose ball.

Fumbles marred the contest throughout. Eastern had six and Central four.

Cookman's fine punting kept the Vikings bottled up in their own territory for most of the first half and combined with the strong Rambler line led by Harvey Lynn, Des McLearen and Bob Murphy held Central in check until the fourth quarter.

The first half was scoreless, most of the play being between the Eastern 40 and the Central 20. One of Cookman's boots bounced out of bounds on the Central 3, a 60-yard kick from scrimmage.

Speros Paces Green Tigers With Two Touchdowns

Woodrow Wilson overtook Anacostia for the Southern Division lead of the Interhigh League by defeating Roosevelt's Rough Riders, 26-0 yesterday at Roosevelt.

Big Leo Speros, Green Tiger back, powered the Wilson ground attack, running two touchdowns, and setting up the other two.

In the second period, on a sustained drive from the Roosevelt 44, Speros brought the ball down to the 18.

After one 3-yard gain, Speros again charged through left guard, knocking over the almost entire Roosevelt backfield, to score. Dick Sebastian's conversion attempt was blocked.

Later in the same quarter, with Wilson in possession of a Roosevelt kick on the Riders' 43, Speros again crashed through the line and raced to pay dirt. This time Sebastian's kick was good.

In the third quarter, Speros teamed up with mate Lee Brinson for a 55-yard sustained touchdown romp. At the end a battered Roosevelt line faced Tom Sandoz on the 1, where the Tiger quarterback bucked center for points. Again Sebastian converted.

Ending the third period, Speros, on the Roosevelt 21, tossed a short pass to Back Chris King, who lateraled to Brinson. Brinson came down on the goal line, only to buck over in the next play. Sebastian's kick was no good.

Upperville Horse Wins Hunter Title

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—The William F. Wharton Memorial Trophy for conformation hunters was won by Safety Call, a "second stringer" from the Llangollen farm of Mrs. E. Cooper Person, Upperville, Va., at the National Horse Show today.

The show championship in this class was won last year by Adventure, a stablemate, which didn't place in this event.

Gold Lode, owned by Vernon G. Cardy, Val David, Quebec, was third, picking up two points to retain the lead with 14 points toward the conformation hunter championship.

Portmaker, owned by Dr. and Mrs. Alvin Kay, Bethesda, Md., also was out of the ribbons. Portmaker, reserve champion last year, still is second in points with 10.

Luckett Paces Blair's 26-19 Win

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 4.—Montgomery Blair High School of Silver Spring overcame a 13-7 half-time deficit to defeat Hagerstown, 26-19, before 2200 spectators at Municipal Stadium tonight.

The victory was Blair's second against five setbacks, and the fifth successive loss for Hagerstown.

Ray Luckett, 175-pound Blair fullback, scored one of his team's three second-half touchdowns and twice pegged to Halfback Jimmy Downs for scores in the last half.

The clincher came with 4:10 remaining in the final chapter, Luckett tossing 26 yards to Downs for the tall ythat made it 26-19.

Papach Faces Skins Sunday

Steelers' Biggest Threat Hasn't Scored a Point

The direst threat against the Washington Redskins when they square off with the Pittsburgh Steelers at Griffith Stadium tomorrow afternoon is a young gent who carried the ball only four times in his collegiate career, was ignored in the National Football League draft, and hasn't scored a point all season.

But George Papach, at 24, is one of the brightest stars in pro football today. The 210-pound fullback who was used almost exclusively on defense at Purdue, and got his Steeler job by asking for a tryout, has the best yards-per-carry record of his club. In 49 trips he's amassed 253 yards, an average of 5.16 per trip.

An added oddity about Papach, an air-conditioning engineer in the off-season, is that he's the Steelers' longest punter but never punts. The extra step he habitually takes increases the chances of having the ball blocked.

Despite a minor operation on Halfback Don Sandifer, the Redskins will be at full force tomorrow . . . The Steelers, who will fly in today, will be without the services of two regulars, Don Samuel, left-handed passing halfback, who is out for the season with a dislocated knee, and the club's ace punter, Bill Long, who is nursing a charley horse.

Redskin officials will attend the first N. F. L. draft meeting in Philadelphia Monday . . . But they won't participate in the draw for a "bonus" player, along with the Chicago Bears and Philadelphia Eagles, having already had their turn when they picked Alabama's Harry Gilmer . . . Gilmer, incidentally, will be used extensively in the early part of tomorrow's outing with the purpose of giving him a chance to show his stuff while the game is still within the Redskins' reach . . . Washington is a 7-point favorite, it says here.

BILL BURNETT.

scampering to the 12. On fourth down with 9 yards to go, Mattingly passed for a touchdown with Fornaciari outwrestling Schmid for the ball in the end zone. Dick Haesler converted.

Right away, D'Alonzo powered the Wildcats to their last touchdown. The march covered 62 yards to Georgetown's 1, and John Rogers cracked over. Clavin converted.

The fleet-footed Conn, contained until then, broke loose on the ensuing kickoff. He caught it on his 9, raced up the middle to the 50, and cut sharply to his left. Schmid got his hands on Conn at the Villanova 12, and Don Scott hauled him down at the 2. Mattingly sneaked over from the 1, and Haesler again converted.

By Howard Flieger, Jr.

Ray Fox led McKinley High to a 32-12 win over Chamberlain yesterday at the windswept Eastern Stadium. Fox scored three touchdowns and passed for another.

Fox scored twice in the second period. His first came as he skirted right end and raced over from the Chamberlain 15-yard line, ending a drive that started on the McKinley 20.

Near the end of the second quarter, aided by a 33-yard dash to the Chamberlain 19 by Stoney Jackson, Fox broke over right tackle and scored from the 3. Fox also tallied from the 3 in the third quarter.

Chamberlain drove 54 yards for its first touchdown as the game opened. A passing combination with Buddy Harrell throwing to Ends Doug Pearson and Bob Bartlett gained to the McKinley 2-yard line where Bob Curtis cracked over center for the score.

Chamberlain came to life again in the third quarter and drove from its own 38 to the Trainers' 10-yard strip where Harrell passed to Bob Curtis in the end zone for the last touchdown for Chamberlain. Tom Wall's conversion was low and the score stood 19-12 at the end of the third quarter.

McKinley came back with two tallies in the final period. One by Frank Barbitta; then Fox standing on the Chamberlain 34, passed 17 yards to John Portch, who lateraled to Elwood Cooke who raced over for the final touchdown.

Potomac River Sail Races Listed

By Happy Walker

The Potomac River Sailing Association will wind up its full double-header series of sail races this weekend. Starting at 1 o'clock Sunday, two races are slated for Chesapeake 20s, Thistles, Chesapeake Lightnings, 16s, Comets, Snipes, Penguins and a handicap class on the Potomac off the Speedway.

Meanwhile, plans are being readied for the Potomac River Sailing Association's annual dinner-dance at the Lee Sheraton Hotel on December 9. The affair will also include the election of officers and presentation of trophies to the class high point winners for the season.

RECENTLY THIS COLUMN offered a number of boat plans to the novice boating enthusiasts who were interested in building their own craft. We were swamped with requests, exhausting our supply.

A wire from the Douglas Fir Plywood Association advises that additional plans are on the way. To those who have not received them, we will mail your requested plans pronto.

The announcement by Army Engineers that work has begun on dredging certain parts of the Potomac River to deepen the river channel to the authorized depth comes as welcome news to Washington's boating people.

The authorized river channel depth of 24 feet will permit ocean-going ships to make Washington a port of call when the work is completed, Army engineers point out.

As a result of this action, the United States Travel Agency is now booking West Indian cruise weeks for next year and are going ahead with plans to make Washington a port of call for the luxury liner, U. S. S. Evangeline.

Schied Horse Disqualified In Early Race

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Nov. 4.—Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Seven League won today's feature race but failed to create as much disturbance as was aroused by a disqualification earlier in the program.

The son of Our Boots, a "kick in the pants" bet in the parlance of the backstretch, got home a length and a half in front of the closest opposition in the Cohort.

Brookfield Farms' Istabet was second and four lengths in front of a photo for third that went to F. Ambrose Clark's Flying Ship over Walter M. Jeffords' Green Baize. A field of six competed.

Seven League, ridden by Jockey Doug Dodson, was clocked in 1:11 3/5 for the six furlongs over a fast track. Despite top weight of 12 pounds, Seven League was favorite from the start of the betting and paid $3.80 to win.

Dodson had Seven League off on top but elected to coast while allowing Itsabet to move into the lead. Itsabet burned oil while on top. Entering the stretch Dodson gave Seven League the gun and the handwriting was on the wall. It was Seven League going away from the tired Itsabet at the end.

Foul Charged at Gate

Few horses, particularly in Maryland, have been disqualified for something that happened leaving the starting gate. For the most part officials have charged to "poor racing luck" occurrences at the break and at the first turn.

But today C. H. Schied's Maryland Day was in front from flag fall to finish and to the amazement of the crowd of 10,000 his number came down and Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Foreign Affair was moved into the win position.

Jockey Bobby Martin registered the objection against Jockey Ira Hanford each of whom has claimed fouls against the other during the Maryland season.

Just before the eighth race, the stewards announced that Hanford has been suspended for ten days for rough riding leaving the gate. It was the second disciplinary action of the day. Jockey Ernest Ballenger was set down for the remainder of the meeting for rough riding in yesterday's third race.

Pictures Cited as Evidence

Stewards said that Maryland Day, on the outside, bumped into Surprise Girl which in turn impeded Foreign Affair—a triple play. Officials delayed the program for more than 15 minutes to see the movies and reported the pictures "plainly showed the foul." They also said the movies confirmed reports of patrol judges.

The switching of Maryland Day, 12-1 shot, and Foreign Affair, a 1-2 choice brought a chorus of boos which seemed to signify that the decision was opposed by many more than bet on the longshot.

The race was for 2-year-olds foaled in Maryland that participated in the yearling show held here in the spring of 1948. A trophy was scheduled to be presented to the breeder of the winner in the winner's circle but, apparently due to the confusion, the ceremony was postponed—a smart move if there ever was one.

Terp Jayvees Edge Princeton

Maryland's Jayvees won their only scheduled game of the year yesterday, beating the Princeton Jayvees, 21-20, in the last two minutes of play at College Park.

With the Tigers leading 20-14, the Junior Terps drove from their 20, aided by a pass interference ruling worth about 30 yards, to score on a lateral-forward pass combination that connected for six yards and a touchdown.

Stabbing Victim Studied, Wed Here

The Bulgarian-born 'Voice of America" employe, who was stabbed to death in a New York hotel yesterday, was married, educated, employed, and naturalized in Washington.

Mrs. Mushana Dimitrova Balkanska Zolyak was a student at the George Washington University from 1941 to 1945.

She married John Zolyak, 39, in 1941 in Washington, and until recently lived with him at 1124 10th st., nw. He works in the State Department's Division of Research for Europe.

She worked as a clerk for the National Lumber Manufacturers Association at 1319 18th st., nw., and in the mailing room of an F st., department store while she attended GW.

In August, 1947, at the age of 31, she became a citizen in Washington.

Independent, Intellectual

Mushana Zolyak was independent, intellectual, "strikingly beautiful," and almost friendless in Washington, according to Miss Elna Wilcox, Navy Department clerk of 604 21st st., S. Arlington, Va.

Miss Wilcox said yesterday she first met Mushana at Mountain State Business College in Parkersburg, W. Va. in 1939, and became one of her few good friends during the next six years.

She said Mushana came to Parkersburg on a student visa "simply because she liked the description of the place in some catalogues she read while she was studying in Sofia."

That's typical of how she acted," Miss Wilcox said, "strictly on her own, and often without any obvious reason."

Father Didn't Approve

"Her father didn't approve of her coming to America, I guess," Miss Wilcox said. "Her mother sent her some money, but she lived with some family here and did housework I know. And then when Bulgaria was overrun she went strictly on her own."

She came to Washington to further her education. At G. W. she studied botany, German, English, Spanish, economics and advanced Russian during her four years there.

In 1941, she married Zolyak, who was born in Ramey, Pa., of Russian parents. Zolydak, who left immediately for New York yesterday, was in the Navy during the war. Associates in New York said the couple had separated, according to the United Press, but friends here were unable to confirm this.

apartment to the raven-haired translator, said Mrs. Zolyak told her that Wei had threatened her life when she tried to break off with him.

Psychiatrist Reassured Her

She said Mrs. Zolyak finally persuaded Wei to see a psychiatrist because of his "moody and depressed" temperament.

"The psychiatrist told her she didn't have to worry about Wei's doing her harm," Mrs. Coghlin said. She said that Wei called many times trying to 'persuade Mrs. Zolyak to see him once more.

"One night he called 14 times," Mrs. Coghlin said. "She didn't love him. She used to be annoyed when he'd call her. But she answered the phone because he played on her sympathy." She said Mrs. Zolyak's feelings toward the Chinese U. N. clerk were of "friendly concern."

Assistant Medical Examiner Nathan Ludwig said the couple had been dead about eight hours when he examined the bodies shortly before noon.

"It is definitely homicide and suicide," he said.

Mrs. Zolyak, a small, well-shaped women, was hired by the Voice of America in December, 1948, at $3727 a year. She was born in Bulgaria, became a United States citizen in Washington in 1947 and received a B. A. degree from Barnard College of Columbia University.

She Studied Here

Police said her husband was employed in Washington. She attended George Washington University before attending Columbia.

Wei, born in Peiping and a graduate of China University there, joined the U. N. in September, 1947, as a clerk, fourth grade, and worked in the documents section at Lake Success at an annual salary of $2360. He had served as a U. N. guard in Palestine from June 19 to July 14, 1948.

This was how police reconstructed the couple's last evening.

Wei registered at the Hotel Alamac on upper Broadway at 8 p. m. under the name, T. C. Li, and was assigned room 922. He checked out a short time later. In the room, police found a woman's slip.

Light Glowing Red

At 12:30 a. m., Wei returned and asked for a room "higher up." He was given room 1701. The night clerk said Mrs. Zolyak was not in the lobby. A bellhop entered the room with a passkey several hours later, after the switchboard operator reported the light from 1701 had been glowing red for a long time.

Police found ticket stubs for last night's performance by the Sadler Wells Ballet Company of "Sleeping Beauty" at the Metropolitan Opera House in the room's wastepaper basket.

The woman lay on her side, facing Wei. There were wounds across her chest, down her side and across her back. Wei was clad only in blue-and-white shorts. Her purple dress was folded on a chair. Nearby was the exotic, flowered gown of a size to fit the woman.

Beer Bottle Empty

An empty beer bottle stood on the floor. There was no luggage.

Mrs. Zolyak had worked yesterday. Superiors said her work was satisfactory and associates said she did not appear upset. They said she often talked of two brothers in Bulgaria, one of whom was in a concentration camp and the other working as a miner.

It was learned that State Department security men asked that Mrs. Zolyak's connection with the State Department be kept secret on the grounds that her parents in Bulgaria might be mistreated.

$13 Million Extra Due Depositors Of Closed Bank

Cleveland, Nov. 4 (AP).—Some 650,000 former depositors in the Union Trust Co., which was closed in 1933, will be paid more than 13 million dollars about December 15 in an "extra" dividend.

When it folded the bank had a deposit liability of about 106 million dollars.

Depositors have been paid in full but an agreement made in 1938 provides that note holders might receive 50 per cent of the remaining net assets of Union Properties, Inc., after they were paid off. Those assets today amounted to 26 million plus.

British Lady Soldiers To Get Green Uniforms

London, Nov. 4. (AP)—The War Office approved today a bottle green uniform for Britain's lady soldiers.

All traces of the old olive drab will vinish in the new official garb for the women's Royal Air Corps.

nw., and William C. Larkin, 27, of 4213 Rusk st. ne.

When Lasiter informed Blick of the telephone call and the removal of his pictures to Maryland, he offered to have them brought back, if Blick desired.

Blick declined.

"What you don't know," he told Lasiter, "is that an undercover man was in your place last night and bought several sets. We have them for evidence. We don't need what you might furnish now."

Laister told officers he obtained the pictures through Benjamin, and Benjamin said he bought them in Philadelphia and New York.

In some of the sets of pictures seized in Benjamin's place, were pamphlets bearing the message:

"Photos listed here have been expressly shot for use of students who desire to study the figure, lighting, and composition through the medium of photography."

Lieutenant Blick said his investigation of the pictures began when he received letters of complaint about them, particularly one from the father of a 14-year-old boy. The father wrote that he had found some of the pictures in his son's possession, and learned that the boy bought them. He wrote that he then went to the Midway Arcade, viewed the pictures on sale there, and was "shocked."

All six defendants were fingerprinted, over their protests. They were taken before United States Commissioner C. S. Lawrence and released in $500 bond each for a hearing on November 16.

One on the Aisle—

Lawford 'Retired' At the Age of 9

By Richard L. Coe

OUR CUTEST REPORTER went out of her mind when she learned I was lunching with Peter Lawford.

She wanted to give me a pair of scissors to cut off a lock of the guy's brown, wavy hair, but it wouldn't have done any good. "I'm holding on to all the hair I've got for as long as I can," said Pete.

But he did send her back a half-smoked cigarette—the same snazzy kind she smokes, as it happened, writing a note on it for her. Now she's singing Christmas carols across the hall.

Pete's effect on our scribe is typical. He thinks it's very nice, frankly likes it, but has no swelled head over it. Matter of fact, fan clubs are distinctly frowned upon by the studios these days and Pete explained why.

"There was a delightful young girl when I was just getting the breaks. She was only about 14, but she neglected her studies, spent all her time organizing fan clubs all over the world. No kidding, it was terrific, the places she dug up. Her mother and father—he was a clergyman—were worried sick about her. The only way was to give her the cold treatment and she came out of it. But it sure was tough while it lasted."

The Metro star, now working hard and effectively as the Capitol's stage headliner, hasn't always had it so good. English-born, he made a half-dozen pictures before he was 9 as the result of his political mother's visit to a London studio. "At 9 I retired," boasts Pete.

Then came a job he'll always remember. His father and mother (political Conservatives) were in Palm Beach when the war broke out and Pete took to tending a car lot. He made $25 a week, worked hard and thought it was fun. Later on he went back to acting at Honolulu's Community Theater and after arriving in Hollywood his rise was quick. He was ushering in a Westwood theater for $15 a week when the studio called for him to do six weeks' acting at $100 per. Pete figured he'd still be ahead of the game even if the new job didn't lead to anything. It led to "Mrs. Miniver," "Thunderbirds," "A Yank at Eton," "The White Cliffs," "The Picture of Dorian Gray," "Cluny Brown," "Good News," "It Happened in Brooklyn" and "The Red Danube," among others.

What I liked about Pete's stage turn was his willingness to do something more than banter about Hollywood. His windup is a jitterbug job, pushed into his act at Thursday morning's rehearsal by the Capitol's manager, Joel Margolis. It's good fun. Pete thinks that the reason some film stars don't stack up well on stage is that they don't take enough trouble about it. Because he hopes to keep at the business till he's 80, he welcomed the sacroiliac-tempting finale, showing he's not afraid of work.

THE HIPPODROME folded last night . . . evidently suddenly . . . Somehow with the Playhouse, Little, Dupont and Trans-Lux vying for the foreign films, there didn't seem much else to do . . . As yet no plans for the future, but Owner Sidney Lust is not a man to have no plans growing under his traveled feet.

THE KENSINGTON Little Theater, formed only a few weeks ago, already is in rehearsal, working on "Queen for a Day." . . . This comedy by Carl Webster Pierce was suggested by that radio program . . . Temporary officers of the new group are: Mrs. Robert Herder, director; Allen H. Jones, assistant director; Mrs. Robert MacHatton, business manager; Mrs. R. B. Schuyler, stage manager, and Mrs. Blanche Ryder, treasurer.

THE UNIVERSITY of Maryland's University Theater will present "The Glass Menagerie" for a six-night run opening Monday on its campus stage . . . Tennessee Williams' four-part drama will be acted by Pernell Roberts, Elizabeth Spurr, Kathryn Hallgren and Tom Jones, with Dr. Charles Niemeyer directing.

NEXT WEEK IN BALTIMORE: "The Student Prince," at Ford's.

Lleras Accused In Protest by Colombians

Bogota, Colombia, Nov. 4 (U.P.). The Colombian Embassy in Washington was instructed today to protest against alleged intervention in internal Colombian politics by Secretary General Alberto Lleras Camargo of the Organization of American States.

Lleras, former Colombian President, in a statement issued in Washington this week, urged that a "party of patriots" be organized to save Colombia from political chaos.

A formal protest against Lleras was ordered despite the action of the Colombian Senate last night in approving the Lleras statement. The Senate vote was 30 to 18.

During debates, the United States was criticized by Conservative leader Silvio Villegas. He said that in its "interventions" in Latin America, the United States grabbed more than one million square miles of territory, including some from Colombia, through the secession of Panama in 1903.

The political crisis continued to have economic repercussions. German Merino, manager of the coffee trading and exporting firm of Merino & Co., announced that "due to the total insecurity the country is living through," it has suspended trading after 20 years in business.

Israel, Arab Forces United On Border Patrol

Tel Aviv, Nov. 4 (NYHT).—On the armistice-bound frontier of the Negev Desert, from the Gaza region south toward Rafah, Egyptian and Israeli armies have combined forces on a small scale to halt skirmishes and border clashes which for two months have disturbed the tranquillity of the area, it was reported today.

Daily an Egyptian and Israeli officer, each with two jeeps and a small complement of enlisted personnel, rendezvous at a predesignated point in No-Man's-Land and commence a sweep of the roads. Since the joint operation began, there have been no further reports of violence.

The joint patrol provides the first known instance of unified Arab-Israeli military action.

FHA Orders Increases In Pay for 5400, to Go Into Effect Next Week

FEDERAL HOUSING has ordered the pay rates for its 5400 employes boosted in line with salaries fixed by Congress in the new Pay-Classification Act. The first pay checks with the higher rates will go to FHA employes next week.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING also has approved the new pay scale for its 1000 per annum employes. The GPO employes aren't under the Classification Act.

RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE still hasn't ordered the increase for its 4400 employes. Its officials are working on it, however, and they may take the step early next week. RFC is still making layoffs and additional reductions will be made if the salaries are boosted to offset the cost.

The new law brought FHA and RFC employes under the Classification Act for the first time, but Civil Service was given six months to convert the jobs to classified scale. The agencies are free to act on their own motion in the meantime.

VA: No new general reduction of its administrative employes is now contemplated. Several field offices, however, either have made or will make reductions by the end of this year. These actions have inspired reports of a general layoff, which is so much gossip.

Congress approved a transfer of 15 millions to VA administratives' account in the last supplemental money bill. This switch of money prevented a discharge of about 7800 additional employes. VA has had a long "freeze" on its administrative personnel. Employe turnover in the meantime has reduced VA's staff.

JOB NEWS: These are among the Civil Service examinations now open: stenographer and typist, $2450; student dietitian, $1470; clinical psychologist, $4600 to $7600; aeronautical research scientist, $3825 to $10,000; dietitian, $3100 to $5400; geologist, $4600 to $7600; engineer, $3825 to $10,000; coal mine inspector, $4600 to $5400; oceanographer, $3825 to $6400; accountant and auditor, $3825 to $6400; astronomer, $3825 to $7600; printer, $2.12 an hour.

Patent examiner, $3100; policeman and fireman, $3077; medical officer, $4600 to $6400; agricultural research scientist, $3825 to $8800; librarian, $3100; geographer, $3825 to $10,000; draftsman (engineering, cartographic and statistical), $2200 to $3825; pharmacologist, $3825 to $10,000; printer-proofreader, $2.12 an hour; veterinarian, $3825; physical science administrator, $5400 to $10,000; cartographic survey aid, $2200 to $3825; highway bridge engineer, $3825 to $5400; medical X-ray technician, $2450 to $2650; teacher, $2650 to $3450; teacher-adviser, $2875 to $3100; cartographer, $4600 to $7600; public health educator, $4600 to $7600; boiler fireman, $2252 to $2674; translator, $2875 to $8800, and junior agricultural assistant, $3100.

EXPLANATION: On Tuesday the official General Accounting Office salary chart appeared here. Scores of employes have called and written in to question its accuracy. This will answer them—the chart was correct to the last letter. It was checked and double-checked.

Most of the confusion arose, it seems, over the fact that several former salary rates were carried in the table two and three times. This is the explanation for it; the former salary rate of $2724, for example, was carried three times, a correct procedure. The first $2724 was the old CAF-4 minimum, which was converted to the new GS-4 minimum at $2875; the second $2754 was the old middle of CAF-3, which was converted to the middle of GS-3, paying $2930, and the third $2724 was the old maximum of CAF-2, which was converted to the new maximum of GS12 with a $2930 salary. Check your correct table that appeared here for your answers.

MEETINGS: Former House Civil Service Committee Chairman Robert Ramspeck will speak at 2 p. m. today at a meeting of the National Association of Retired Employes to be held at the National Museum, 10th st. and Constitution ave. . . . Next Tuesday at 7:30 p. m., Assistant Defense Secretary W. J. McNeil will discuss "What Top Management Expects of Personnel Officers," at a Society for Personnel Administration meeting in the Archives Auditorium

Macedonia Raid Warrant Ruled Illegal

Court Says Gambling Evidence Against Nick The Greek Is Not Admissible

District Court Judge Edward A. Tamm yesterday declared illegal the search warrant used by United States deputy marshals March 25 in a raid on the Macedonia Coffee House, 746 9th st. nw.

As a result evidence seized in the raid, one of eight made by the United States attorney's office that day, will not be admissible in the gambling trial of Nicholas (Nick the Greek) Floratos, coffee house proprietor of 1020 9th st. nw.

Judge Tamm ruled that too long a time elapsed between the date of issuance of the warrant, March 25, and the date of the gambling activity alleged to have been seen by a Government agent, December 10, 1948.

Evidence against 2 others of the 36 men indicted as a result of the raids has been suppressed on similar grounds.

The affidavit alleging gambling activity at the coffee house, and as a result of which the search warrant was issued, was signed by Pasquale Sanducci, a New York Department of Justice employe.

Floratos was charged with accepting a numbers bet. He was represented yesterday by William B. O'Connell. The Government was represented by Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin.

D. C. Burglar In 64 'Jobs,' Out on Bail, Seized Again

Hagerstown Police Seize Youth in Act of Robbing Motor Agency

David Conners, Washington's 22-year-old housebreaker, de luxe, is in jail again for housebreaking, this time at Hagerstown, Md.

The smooth youth who looted 64 homes in 18 months here before he was finally detected a month ago, was arrested early yesterday with another Washington boy as result of the curiosity of an alert Hagerstown citizen. His arrest came while he was free on $1000 bond here for his 64 confessed burglaries.

The other youth was identified by Hagerstown police as George Watts, also 22, who has roomed for a few weeks past at 413 Seward sq. se. Conners gave his address as 529 8th st. se. A relative said he had previously lived there, but moved out several months ago.

After his arrest here, he took his clothing to that address and visited occasionally. A telephone is listed for David Conners at the 8th st. se. address, though he gave his last name to Washington police as Connors. The relative confirmed that the man in jail at Hagerstown is the same one arrested here.

The Hagerstown resident, whose name police there declined to disclose, noticed an auto drive up shortly after midnight yesterday morning in front of his home, about four blocks from the downtown section. The citizen noticed two men from the car scrutinze streets and alleys nearby, then change from business suits into coveralls in the auto.

He summed police, who found the two suits in the auto, which bore District license plates. They waited. Presently, officers said, the two men returned carrying stamps and other valubles which they determined had been stolen from an automobile agency. The pair had burglar tools, officers said. They were held in the county jail at Hagerstown last night.

When he was arrested here, Conners calmly talked of his wellnigh perfect methods of housebreaking. He always worked between 10 a. m. and 2 p. m., he told police. He determined by knocking on doors, or by telephoning, that no one was in.

Freight Kills Man, 50, Near Chain Bridge

12-Car Train Fails To Stop in Time on Georgetown Branch

A man tentatively identified as Morris Brown Widenhouse was struck and killed yesterday by a freight train on the Georgetown branch of the B. & O. Railroad just below Chain Bridge.

The train, backing in toward Georgetown, was rounding a curve when the conductor and flagman in the caboose saw the man lying across the tracks 75 yards ahead.

The flagman, George E. Burgee, 39, of Lanham, Md., threw the emergency brake and he and the conductor Frank R. Lake, 63, of 2727 Lorcom lane, Arlington, shouted frantically at the man but he did not move.

The 12-car train dragged the body about 40 feet before coming to a stop. The man, who police said was about 50 years, was still breathing when trainmen reached him but died on the tracks about 20 minutes later. A smashed wine bottle lay near him.

A death certificate was withheld by Coroner A. Magruder pending an autopsy and chemical analysis.

It was the second accident of its kind on the same tracks in two weeks. A 50-year-old man died October 25 after being struck by a switching freight train on the tracks along K st. nw., under the Whitehurst Freeway. Conductor Lake was also aboard that train.

Population Gain Here Set at 31%

The District's population is remaining fairly constant a Census Bureau estimate indicated yesterday, but it is 31.3 percent above that of 1940.

The bureau estimated the District's population at 870,000 as of July 1 this year, compared with 863,000 estimated on the same date in the preceding year.

The change of 7000 in the estimated total contrasts strongly with the early war days when Washington became the fastest growing of any major city, and the population here zoomed more than 30 percent within two years.

Latest Census estimates for the Washington metropolitan area place the total at 1,402,000, nearly a 45 percent increase over the figures for 1940.

Periodic estimates will receive their authoritative check in next year's decennial census of the nation.

Cases Total 101

Polio Strikes 4 in D. C.; Boy, 9, Dies

The Health Department in its weekly report yesterday listed four cases of polio, one of them fatal, in the District.

Frederic W. Brooks, 9, of 2815 Rittenhouse st. nw., died at Children's Hospital Monday a few hours after he had been admitted for treatment of bulbar polio. He was the second District polio fatality of the year and the ninth in the Washington area.

Other cases reported were a 4-year-old boy, 1600 block of Buchanan st. ne.; a 5-year-old boy, 4800 block of 4th st. nw., and a 6-year-old boy, 3900 block of 20th st. ne. All were taken to Children's Hospital.

This brought the total number of District cases this year to 101 compared to 122 at the same time last year. Health Department officials said one case reported incorrectly as a District case last month had been dropped from their list.

Falls Church Tax Jumble Advances Step

The Falls Church jumbled property-tax situation moved one step closer to solution last night following a meeting of Mayor Albert M. Orme and city officials with a group of disgruntled title lawyers.

After an hour-long session at Falls Church City Hall, both groups expressed hope for a workable settlement.

Allen C. Adams, president of the Arlington County Bar Association, headed a group consisting of attorneys Jerome H. Harris, John Aylor, Lytton Gibson and Leonard Hurley who conferred with Mayor Orme, Lee M. Rhodes, chairman of the finance committee of the City Council and James E. Ferguson, city treasurer. City Attorney LaRue Van Meter also sat in briefly.

Upshot was that the lawyers will submit in writing their recommendations for a solution which will probably be acted upon by the city council at their November 15 meeting, Mayor Orme said.

Adams indicated that his group was interested in making sure that certifications from city officials on property as tax-free or otherwise were reliable.

The lawyers have claimed previously their clients have been receiving delinquent tax bills lately on property that had been certified as tax-free by city officials.

Water Main Survey Saves D. C. $160,000

Checkup Is Described By City Engineer as Convention Closes

The District is saving $160,000 a year as a result of a survey of leaks in the city's water mains and a check of meters used by large water consumers, a Water Department officials said yesterday.

James R. Mitchell, District engineer in charge of water consumption and conservation, emphasized the value of such surveys in a panel discussion before members of the Chesapeake section, American Water Works Association.

Mitchell said the leak survey, made over the past six years, disclosed losses of water totalling 7,456,000 gallons a day. During the same period, the other check showed that large meters were under-registering the water being used by 2,350,000 gallons daily, he said.

Two-Day Meeting Ends

The panel discussion, moderated by David V. Auld, superintendent of the District water division, came during the final session of the waterworks officials' two-day meeting at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Auld said another 1,400,000 gallons has been saved in the last five years by removing some 5000 connections to mains.

Most of these were abandoned by consumers, he said, and they also included 22 supposedly abandoned pipes being used surreptitiously to get free water.

R. L. Orndorff, assistant water division superintendent, said the District system is "particularly plagued" with dead end mains, which tend to decrease pressure throughout the system. These are continuously being eliminated, and every paving project planned by the highway department is being studied for possible elimination work to be done at the same time, he said.

Clarke Gardner Elected

The Chesapeake section, which includes water officials from the District, Maryland and Delaware, yesterday elected Clarke Gardner, city engineer and superintendent of the water department of Salisbury, Md., as chairman.

D. C. Superintendent Auld was elected vice chairman, while Carl J. Lauter, chemical engineer for the Washington Aqueduct System, Corps of Engineers, was named secretary-treasurer.

Trustees elected were R. C. Willson, water department superintendent of Hagerstown, Md.; W. Compton Wills, water department manager, Wilmington, Del.; W. J. Edwards, city councilman and water commissioner, Cumberland, Md., and J. S. Strohmeyer, deputy, deputy water engineer, Baltimore.

Dangers Observed

In another session, William H. Cary, jr., director of the District's Bureau of Public Health Engineering, cited dangerous but "unspectacular" hazards attached to the work of waterworks employes.

For instance, invisible liver destruction can occur when a worker breathes vapor from a degreasing tank unless precautions are taken, he said. Gases and chemicals used in water treatment may cause chronic respiratory irritation, he added.

E. R. Cotton, director of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin, moderated a discussion panel on organizing and financing sanitary districts.

The final session included a discussion of the benefits of the short course for water and sewage plant operators, held last June at the University of Maryland.

Police Arrest 2 Men Here As Gamblers

Two men were arrested yesterday in separate forays by members of the police Vice Squad on U. S. Commissioner's warrants. They were charged separately with operating a lottery and possessing numbers slips.

Exton T. Frazier, 45, who gave police his address as 733 Hobart pl. nw., was arrested in a lunchroom in the 2800 block of Georgia ave. nw. Arraigned before U. S. Commissioner C. S. Lawrence, he was released in $1500 bond and a hearing set for December 7. Policemen testified an undercover man made a "play" with Frazier.

In a drugstore in the 2700 block of 14th st. nw., Edward H. Trundle, 41, of 321 Madison st. nw., was picked up. He was released by Commissioner Lawrence under $1000 bond when officers testified that a 10th Precinct detective had observed Trundle taking bets. Hearing was set for November 9.

Police said that when Trundle was arrested he had numbers slips and $916 in cash in his possession.

Trundle was arrested in 1947 in the 14th st. nw. area in what police then described as a gambling headquarters. He was arrested in the same area last August in another raid on an alleged gambling headquarters, but the case was nolle prossed when it was disclosed police did not have a warrant to enter the place.

Judgment Fixed For Camera Repair

A Chillum (Md.) carpenter was ordered in the civil section of Hyattsville Police Court yesterday to pay $69.95 for the repair of a camera damaged when he tussled with a staff photographer of The Washington Post last January.

The suit for damages was instituted against Heath by the Aetna Casualty & Surety Co., seeking to recover the amount it had paid to The Washington Post.

Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie issued a judgment in that amount against Arthur D. Heath, 3 Twin Oaks dr., to pay for repairs to the camera of Photographer Charles Del Vecchio.

The defendant, present, attributed the attack to the fact that he was "upset" by the explosion and fire.

Short Circuit Blamed for P. O. Explosion

Investigation Shows Fire Started in 8th Floor Cables

The three-alarm fire and explosion which rocked the new Post-office Building Tuesday started from a short circuit in the electrical distribution system, a preliminary report revealed yesterday.

Fourteen persons were injured, none of them seriously, and 3000 routed from the building at 12th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. in the mid-morning fire and explosion. Large stretches of ceiling and partitions were blown down.

The preliminary report was released yesterday by W. E. Reynolds, Commissioner of Public Buildings. The investigating committee will continue its work to confirm the tentative findings reported and to determine, if possible, the causes of the initial short circuit.

In the report, the committee said that it was "extremely fortunate" that workers in the affected areas on the seventh and eighth floors left before the explosions began "since otherwise casualties might have been heavy."

Most of the damage to the building, the report said, was caused by the explosions and little by the fire.

Evidence uncovered in the preliminary investigation led the committee to the following tentative conclusions:

1. The fire started in the electrical distribution system from a short circuit in secondary main cables on the eighth floor.

2. Electrical conductors between the transformer vaults became overheated.

3. Insulation of the conductors became vaporized in the ducts. The resulting gas, which is believed to be inflammable, leaked out at the pull boxes and mixed with the air in the space above the eighth-floor ceiling and over the ceiling of the outside rooms of the seventh story.

4. While this was happening, gas escaping at the panel box which had already been ignited was acting as a "giant blow torch."

5. When the insulation in the pull boxes was gone there was arcing sufficient to sever four conductors in the pull box near room 8505 and three in the pull box in front of the transformer.

6. Arcing and heat at these pull boxes ignited the explosive gas in the ceiling space, first near room 8505, several minutes later at the transformer.

The committee praised the D. C. Fire Department for its prompt response and said successful evacuation of the building was probably due to the work of Donald J. Berkmeyer and telephone operator Mrs. Helen McGrath of the Federal Communications Commission and Public Buildings Administration employes William F. Airey and Ross M. Craddock, who sounded the alarm.

Heater Blast Burns Woman Critically Here

A woman was in critical condition at Casualty Hospital yesterday from first, second and third degree burns suffered, police said, in the explosion of a heater in her home.

She is Mrs. Virginia Countee, 36, who with her husband, Robert, had moved to a home at 1023 2nd st. ne., the day before. Police said she was eating breakfast near the heater when it blew up. The burns covered a large part of her body.

Damage estimated by company offials at $6000 was done to rugs by a blaze which swept through the interior of the Cassabian Rug Cleaning Co., 3024 O st. nw., firemen said. Fire marshals were investigating to determine the cause of the blaze.

Three tire companies suffered an undetermined loss when a fire consumed the interior of their building at 312 G st. nw., early yesterday. They were the Associated Tire Service, Harvey J. Dudding, and the G Street Tire Shop.

Fire marshals also were investigating the cause of that fire. A high wind which was blowing brought fear that the blaze might spread out of control, and a second alarm was turned in. However, the early-arriving firefighters brought it under control and the additional equipment was turned back.

Thirty persons fled from a rooming house at 1301 P st. nw., early yesterday morning when fire broke out in a first floor front room. The house filled with smoke, and the occupants left by a back door. Damage was confined to the one room, firemen said. One man was treated at the scene for slight burns. Police did not obtain his name.

Youth Sentenced In Auto Theft, Fatal Accident

A Capitol Heights (Md.) youth was sentenced yesterday in Prince Georges County Circuit Court to four years in the State Reformatory for theft of an auto which figured in a fatal accident September 12.

William A. Strine, 19, 621 60th ave., drew the prison term from Judge John B. Gray, jr., after pleading guilty to the theft charge. Judge Gray ordered that the sentence run concurrently with a three-year term previously imposed on Strine for manslaughter in connection with the same accident.

Victim of the crash was Clarence L. Reh, 17, 1300 52d ave., Hillside, Md., whose station wagon was overturned when it was struck by an auto operated by Strine on the Marlboro pike near Andrews Air Force Base. The auto driven by Strine had been stolen earlier from an Army captain in Hyattsville, according to Detectives Wilson Purdy and Vincent Free.

Police Search Trains for Young Robber

Travelers in and out of Union Station last night got an added thrill both with the arrival of President Truman and the intensive search of six trains for a youthful bandit who took $300 from a downtown liquor store.

The special detail awaiting the President aided the robbery squad in following up a tip that the armed youth had taken a cab to the terminal from the holdup scene.

And the victim, Joseph D. Foter, 2117 Tunlaw rd. nw., no longer considers holdups much of a novelty.

A lone bandit last night bought a half-pint of whisky from him, lingered a while in his D. C. Liquor Mart, 907 H st. nw., listening to the radio, then stuck a .32-caliber automatic in the proprietor's face and relieved him of the cash.

Footer told police that this was the third time in the past two years that his store had been robbed. Bandits took around $100 one time; about $800 the other, he said.

The proprietor was alone at 8:25 when the holdup occurred, but a helper, William Davis, 727 3d st. ne., wandered in, and joined Footer behind the counter when both were ordered to lie down.

Rust Is Resentenced to Year After Delay by Heart Attack

James C. Rust, whose one-year prison term for assault was stayed temporarily in Prince Georges County Circuit Court October 28 after he suffered a heart attack, was resentenced to the same term yesterday.

Judge John B. Gray, jr., who with Judge Dudley Digges had imposed the original sentence when Rust pleaded guilty, ordered the defendant sent to the Maryland House of Correction for 12 months. He had received a medical report stating that Rust was physically able to stand imprisonment.

The report, submitted by Dr. James Sasscer, county jail physician, said tests at the Prince Georges County Hospital during the last week showed no evidence of a chronic heart condition or other "organic" ailments.

Rust, 57, of 5721 39th st., Hyattsville, indicted for assaulting his estranged wife, Elsa, collapsed in the courthouse corridors a few moments after the original entence was imposed last week. His attorney had pleaded for probation or a suspended sentence on the ground the defendant was too ill to go to jail.

Judges Gray and Digges, on learning that Gray had collapsed, ordered the sentence stricken pending a medical examination.

Rust was indicted for assault with intent to kill and assault and battery. The first count of the indictment was quashed when he agreed to plead guilty to the lesser charge.

Former Owner of Club Madre Sentenced To 32 Months to 8 Years on Dope Charge

Odessa M. Madre, 40, a police informer and one-time night club owner, was sentenced yesterday to serve from 32 months to 8 years in prison for illegally keeping and selling narcotics.

Sentence was imposed by Judge Richmond B. Keech of District Court.

At one time she owned the Club Madre, 2204 14th st. nw., which she subleased to a corporation. The club's liquor license was suspended for selling after hours in 1948.

She was once convicted of operating a bawdy house and in 1945 paid a $150 fine for conspiracy to violate the numbers lottery laws.

Miss Madre is currently awaiting court action on new narcotics charges resulting from her arrest October 18 in connection with mass raids by Federal and District offices.

Yesterday's sentence resulted from her arrest last June after police found cocaine and heroin in her home. An informer who was also a dope addict testified that Miss Madre sold her narcotics on several occasions.

In another case, a 30-year-old waitress was ordered by Judge Alexander Holtzoff to "humbly beg forgiveness" of a policeman whom she kicked with her knee when he was arresting her. The policeman was Pvt. Melvin F. Wesley.

The woman is Mrs. Fleta Vining of 807 10th st. nw. She promised that she would make the apology and won a continuance for a week for sentence.

Another woman, Miss Anna M. Gordon, 20, of 925 4th st. nw., found that lying to the court doesn't pay.

Miss Gordon pleaded for probation but Judge Edward A. Tamm sentenced her to serve nine months in jail for assault because of two letters she delivered to the probation office. Both were written in the same ink and handwriting and were on one sheet of paper that had been torn down the middle. One of the letters was dated 1930—when she was a year old—and professed to explain that she had worked faithfully as a domestic the two preceding years.

Dr. Isabelo R. Villaroman, 40, a prominent Filipino physician, was placed on a year's probation for assaulting a gas station attendant with a grease gun. Judge Tamm pointed to Villaroman's "illustrious war record" and crippled condition in giving probation.

Osten Murphy, 22, formerly of 107 L st. se., was given 7 to 21 years' imprisonment for the fatal second-degree shooting last May of William H. Timberlake, 27, of 943 M st. nw.

Joseph Rivers, 35, no fixed address, received 3 to 9 years in prison for stealing from railroad cars.

Virginia Given Zero In Education Effort

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Nov. 4. — A former Virginian told Virginia educators and school trustees today that of all the States in the Union, Virginia is making the least effort to educate her children.

Dr. Francis S. Chase, director of rural editorial services for the University of Chicago, told the final session of the 43d annual convention of the Virginia Education Association that at least half of Virginia's school divisions are operating at an expenditure level which is an almost-certain guarantee of meager programs and of education of low quality."

The former executive secretary of the VEA said Nation-wide studies made for the Council of State Governors show Virginia spends a smaller percentage of the income of its people for public schools than "any State in the South or any State anywhere in the Union with comparable income per child."

$200 a Year Per Child

Dr. Chase said a high-quality education program requires an expenditure of at least $200 a year for each child. Recent figures compiled by the VEA show funds spent for education in Virginia counties vary from $60 to above $160 and in the cities from below $90 to above $200."

Equalizing educational programs throughout the State is the theme of this three-day conference which attracted more than 3000 teachers and school officials to Richmond.

The motion, introduced by School Trustee George T. Reeds of Falls Church, was approved 51-16 after lengthy debate.

The trustees also approved a motion presented by F. W. Robinson of Falls Church urging the Legislature to make available at "the quickest possible moment" at least 44 million dollars through the Literary Fund that could be borrowed for school construction.

At yesterday's session the teachers voted in favor of increased State aid for school construction and for a State program to set teachers' salaries at a minimum of $2000 a year for new teachers to $3200 for those with 12 years experience.

Dr. Chase told the educators that teaching is a "weak spot" in Virginia schools and that salaries are to blame. Nearly half of Virginia's 20,000 teachers have less than four years of college training and nearly 3000 of these have less than two years of preparation, he said.

Fewer than a fourth of Virginia teachers receive as much as $2400 a year while more than 60 percent of teachers in adjoining Maryland receive salaries above $3000.

"It is not surprising," Chase told the teachers, "that there are only 397 seniors in Virginia colleges who are candidates for teaching posts in the elementary schools where there are 4000 vacancies.

Maryland Program Described

Dr. Thomas J. Pullen, superintendent of public instruction in Maryland, told the trustees how Maryland has equalized the educational program offered by various school districts through a program of State aid.

Maryland grants State-wide aid of $20 for each pupil enrolled in school and an additional $400 for each teacher. Part of the salaries of administrative and supervisory personnel is paid by the State.

In addition a community which taxes itself at the rate of 65 cents for each $100 valuation of property will receive other funds if it cannot meet educational standards prescribed by the State, Dr. Pullen said.

The association at its night session honored Earl F. Fielder, chairman of the Hopewell City school board, as the State's outstanding school board member. He was presented a distinguished service certificates and cited for his efforts in persuading the Hopewell City Council to levy a special school tax.

Coulburn Heads Trustees

Named as new president of the Association of School Trustees was Edwin Coulburn of Suffolk, Va. Mrs. J. F. Kincaid of Leesburg was elected to the executive committee and Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell, 2912 North Glebe rd., Arlington, was named regional vice president.

Hungarian Group Gives Pleasing Bill

By Paul Hume

One of my fellow critics said to me last night while leaving the Library of Congress.

"I've never heard anything like that before, in the realm of serious music, that is, and if you say you have, you're a * * * liar."

Just the same, I have. The music in question is the fourth quartet of Bela Bartok (1881-1945). It was played last night by the Hungarian Quartet upon their return to our Congressional Library. It received a superb, a perfect performance.

Its complexities were at times hard to discern through the easy way the gentlemen disposed of them. Every possible device of bowing, plucking, harmonics, and of tonal color was exploited with incredible control. It was a reading to outrival any challengers.

As for the controversial music, it has no precise predecessor in the realm of quartets save in the second and third quartets by the same composer. But the materials which form it can be found in a work by Maurice Ravel written three years before: his opera fantasy, L'Enfant et les Sortileges.

The slidings of bows up and down strings, the stark starts and stops, muted passages, and familiar pizzicato work is all reminiscent of the forest scenes in the Ravel.

But Bartok has given them new meaning in his quartet. He does this by the mere fact that as a quartet his music is absolute and therefore lacks the programmatic interpretation Colette's libretto gives Ravel's music.

Beyond these affairs stands the profundity of the third movement of the Bartok (third out of five). Surely this is one of the greatest utterances in music in our century, with the cello pleading under the six-voiced accompaniment, followed by the violin's vain struggles.

Only the Beethoven quartet which followed Bartok last night do we have anything so new and at once so great in this kind of writing. It was his C sharp minor quartet, worthy to stand with any companion, and too great for most.

And now we have no space left to tell of the beauty of the Hungarian's account of Haydn's last D Major Quartet, ninth he wrote in this key, and so moving! It was a great concert, matchlessly played.

Magruder Says Potter Is Confused

Incumbent Arlington Democrat in the House of Delegates, J. Maynard Magruder, yesterday called his Republican opponent, I. Lee Potter, "again . . . confused, as he has been during the entire campaign" in charges Potter made Thursday.

Magruder issued the statement in answer to an assertion by Potter at a meeting Thursday of the Barcroft Civic League. Potter claimed that "Magruder, as part owner of the nonessential Radio Building on Wilson blvd. took advantage of the entire veterans' housing program by getting a small amount of concrete poured . . . on the final day before controls were imposed so he could proceed with construction."

"In the first place, there is no radio building on Wilson blvd.," Magruder replied yesterday. "The Radio Building on 16th st. was constructed by the T. J. Broyhill Co. in accordance with any governmental rules that may have existed, which is confirmed by the fact that two Government agencies leased space during construction."

A reply to charges by nonpartisan County Board Candidate Robert W. Cox at the same meeting, was also issued yesterday by incumbent Democratic Board member, Basil M. DeLashmutt.

Cox had asserted DeLashmutt voted to postpone a reassessment of county real estate in 1944. Cox maintained DeLashmutt, who has an interest in the Barcroft Apartments, "saved more than $6000 taxes on Barcroft land" by the delay in reassessment.

DeLashmutt answered yesterday that he joined three other board members in voting for the 1944 postponement because (1) "land values were shifting very rapidly during the war . . . (2) It was impossible to obtain adequate personnel for a reassessment . . . (3) It would have been very unfair to thousands of GI's who . . . had no opportunity to protest their reassessments."

He said Cox, "in mentioning the assessment on Barcroft Apartments, as usual did not tell the whole story. Why did he neglect to say that the average assessment on the Barcroft Apartments is $460 higher than the average for the three other large apartment house units in central Arlington?"

Girl Amnesia Victim Remains Unidentified

Visits by a half-dozen Washington residents to an 18-year-old girl amnesia victim in Gallinger Hospital failed to identify her yesterday.

As a result, Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the police women's bureau, said she is convinced that the girl is from some place outside of Washington.

The callers yesterday became interested as a result of a picture of the girl published yesterday in The Washington Post. They believed they knew her, but on seeing her, found otherwise. The girl appeared at police headquarters Tuesday night saying she had been walking three hours in the rain, did not know who she is or where she was going.

Woman 'Healer' Picks 2 Pockets Of $204 Total

A self-styled woman "healer" and two male companions paused briefly in two Montgomery County communities yesterday long enough to pick the pockets of two elderly men.

Frank M. Hackel, 65, of Gaithersburg, told police the woman hailed him from an automobile as he was standing on a corner and asked directions. She alighted, he said, and, after telling him he appeared to be in poor health, rubbed her hands over his back and chest.

After the car drove off, he discovered his wallet and $114 missing from his hip pocket.

A similar story was told by Henry Pfaff, 71, of 4807 Hampden lane, Bethesda, who was accosted in the 7600 block of Wisconsin ave. He lost $90.

Amendments Fight Rages In Virginia

Richmond, Va., Nov. 4 (AP).—G. Alvin Massenburg, of Hampton, Democratic State chairman and Speaker of the House of Delegates, joined in the battle over the Campbell suffrage amendments tonight by giving them his support and saying:

"Never in the history of my long service as a member of the General Assembly, extending over a period of a quarter of a century, have I ever witnessed a more determined effort being made by some to confuse the people."

Massenburg, who was defeated for reelection to the House in the Democratic primary, charged that "they have repeatedly stated that certain inherent rights were being taken from the people; that the adoption of these proposed amendments would impose a mandatory capitation tax of $3 per person, which would become effective immediately."

"Of a Bipartisan Nature"

He labeled such a statement "untrue" and charged that whenever the word "may" has been used in connection with the duties of the General Assembly, this word has been construed to mean "must." He said there is a vast difference.

Massenburg said he favored adoption of the amendments, which would abolish the poll tax and establish a new system of election procedures. He added that the whole question is "one of a bipartisan nature proposed by a bipartisan commission."

"These amendments simply provide for methods to be adopted by the General Assembly whereby the registration book would be kept in an up-to-date and orderly manner; and that the poll tax would be repealed as a prerequisite to voting," Massenburg stated.

He added: "The amendments further provide that both the Democratic and Republican Parties in Virginia will have representation on the various boards charged with the responsibility of conducting elections."

State Senator Frank S. Richeson, of Richmond, also announced yesterday he would vote for the Campbell amendments and urged other Virginians to do likewise November 8.

Urges Vote for Amendments

Richeson, chairman of the Virginia States Rights Democratic Party in the 1948 presidential election, in a statement issued here said he hoped:

". . . That everyone of the 42,000 citizens in Virginia who cast their votes for the States Rights Democratic Party in the last presidential election, as a protest against the Federal Government's attempting to deprive the right of the States to govern themselves, as provided in the Constitution, will cast their votes for the Campbell amendments."

In other political developments, Delegate Robert Whitehead of Nelson and Martin A. Hutchinson of Richmond challenged what they termed "certain utterances from the lips of prominent State officials and party candidates, in effect questioning our party loyalty."

"As life-long Democrats," they said, "we have always supported all of the candidates of the Democratic Party both in national and State elections." But they made it plain they are in "complete disagreement" with the party nominees' support of the Campbell amendments.

Called Not a Party Issue

Their statement added:

"There have recently been held district meetings of the Democratic Party workers ostensibly for the purpose of stimulating support for the Democratic ticket, at which it has been solemnly asserted (as is the case) that the proposed amendments to the Constitution do not constitute a party issue; and yet these meetings have been used as springboards for the waging of an aggressive campaign in behalf of the amendments.

"Whether the amendments are to be ratified or rejected is not a party issue. It is a matter more important than any party, individual, group or faction. As Virginians and Democrats, we claim the right to disagree with any and all party officials and candidates on this fundamental issue, without being subject to censure for alleged party irregularity.

"We are unalterably opposed to the amendments. They violate our conception of a consitutional republic. They would in effect repeal those sections of our Constitution which guarantee our right to vote and leave the matter to the judgment or whims of the Legislature."

Whitehead and Hutchinson, a leader of the anti-organization Democrats, pledged their continuing support to party candidates and their opposition to the suffrage amendments.

Transit Wage Held Far Short Of Fair Budget

Streetcar and bus operators' annual wages are from $600 to $1000 short of the amount needed to properly care for a family of four in Washington, Capital Transit Co. union employes declared yesterday in winding up their case for a 25-cents-an-hour wage raise.

Eli L. Oliver, research economist presenting the union's case before a five-man arbitration board, submitted a budget based on the findings of the Heller Committee for Research of the University of California adjusted to cover Washington costs.

This indicated a family would need $1291 for food, $397 for clothing, $557 for rent, $193 for fuel, electricity and refrigeration, $164 for house furnishings, $233 for social security and income taxes and $1201 for miscellaneous items. The total was $4036.

$3625 in Second Budget

A second budget prepared by the Bureau of Labor Statistics called for $3625 for the same items.

Oliver then noted that transit operators now earn $1.45 an hour on a 40-hour week or $3016 a year.

Another exhibit, one of 128 presented by the union supporting its case for a wage raise and other benefits, showed that the number of passengers per employe-hour worked has increased, indicating harder work for the operators and more income for the company, Oliver said.

Recognizing the CTC warning that wage increases would necessitate a fare boost, Oliver said a fair wage should be paid without reference to the effect on operating expenses.

He pointed out that fares in Washington have risen about 36 percent since 1940, while living costs here have gone up more than 66 per cent. Average Government workers' salaries have risen from $2000 a year to $3600 in that period and hourly earnings from $1 an hour to $1.80 an hour.

Fares on three lines bringing suburban passengers into Washington are higher on those runs than the equivalent CTC fare for the same distance, Oliver said, and the modern CTC streetcars and buses plus express service is superior.

Oliver completed the wage discussion, final item in the union's case, in late afternoon and the hearing was adjourned to November 14 at 9:30 a. m. at the Hamilton Hotel, when the company will begin its case.

Chief Justice Hughes Rites Staged by Bar

Several hundred members of the Supreme Court bar and others gathered here yesterday to pay tribute to the memory of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, who died August 27, 1948.

Speaking in a Supreme Court conference room alongside a large oil painting of Justice Hughes, members of a committee traced the jurist's career as an attorney, New York State Governor, Supreme Court justice, and Secretary of State.

Their talks were in the form of resolutions which later will be submitted to the Supreme Court by Attorney General J. Howard McGrath with the request that they be recorded permanently in the court archives.

Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson was among the members of the supreme bench present.

Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman, who presided at the memorial meeting, described Justice Hughes as "one of the foremost personalities of the world."

John W. Davis, committee chairman, traced Justice Hughes' life, noting that "use of his exceptional mind" continually won him honors and distinctions.

Nathan L. Miller, former New York Governor, praised the jurist for laying down the principle that Federal law was superior to State law and that anything burdening interstate commerce was within the realm of Federal legislation.

Justice Joseph M. Proskauer, formerly of the New York Appellate Division, said Justice Hughes was neither a conservative nor a liberal, but was better described as a "lawyer's lawyer."

Other speakers were Charles Cheney Hyde, professor emeritus of Columbia University, who served under Hughes when he was Secretary of State, and John Lord O'Brien, former Assistant Attorney General.

Policeman Is Freed In Slaying of Negro

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 4 (AP).—An all-white Federal Court jury deliberated only 30 minutes today before acquitting a policeman charged with a civil liberties violation in the killing of a Negro.

Officer Orris Thrash, of Tallassee, Ala., was tried for slaying Amos Starr in October, 1947. The policeman testified earlier in the day he shot the Negro in self-defense while trying to arrest him for a liquor violation.

Thrash told the jury the Negro was behind a road-building machine when he caught up with him after a chase. He said Starr advanced toward him menacingly.

"He threw a rock at me," the policeman testified. "I said 'Stop. Don't come any farther.' He reached down to pick up another rock and I shot three times. He had a knife in his hand. He kept advancing and I kept shooting."

State Reveals 3-Point Plan for Highways

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 4 (AP).—The State Roads Commission has a three-point program under way as part of its plan to modernize Maryland's highways, Commission Chairman Robert M. Reindollar said today.

Reindollar outlined the program to a group of newspaper editors and radio newsmen touring roads in western Maryland counties—Allegany, Garrett and Washington.

It is included in the 200-million-dollar modernization project now underway, he said.

First it calls for rehabilitation of "roads worth saving in the present system." This provides for widening and resurfacing of roads; leveling of steep hills; modifying curves and improving sight distances.

The second part involves replacing stretches of existing routes which are not deemed acceptable for further use. This calls for new high type payments on new rights-of-way.

The third point provides for increases in the ratio of arterial access routes of the new Baltimore-Washington expressway and the new York Road.

Earlier Reindollar said it would cost the State between 600 and 800 million dollars to bring Maryland's roads up to modern standards. A complete revamping of roads and bridges would take from 10 to 15 years, he said. The current 200-million-dollar modernization program is a five-year undertaking.

Reindollar explained that Maryland began trailing other States after establishing a model primary road system in 1915. Maryland's system became obsolete and "now we are out to bring it up to the positio nit once held."

'Cleft Rock' Author Coming

One Fourth of Book Lunch Panel Will Be Feminine

Feminine representative on the guest-author panel of The Washington Post's Book and Author Luncheon Tuesday in the Statler Hotel will be Alice Tisdale Hobart. Appearing on the program with three men, Mrs. Hobart will talk about herself and her latest book, "The Cleft Rock."

MRS. ALICE T. HOBART
. . . guest author on panel

Mrs. Hobart, like the three other authors who will speak at the luncheon, has lived in Washington. She came here after spending nearly 20 years in China.

Mrs. Hobart, then Alice Nourse, went to China to visit her sister, who was teaching in a mission school. While there she met Earle Hobart, was married and remained in the Orient until the Nanking incident of 1927 made it necessary for them to leave. "Oil for the Lamps of China," perhaps Mrs. Hobart's best-known work, is a product of her experiences in China.

From Washington the Hobarts moved to California, where they lived on a Central Valley almond ranch. During the war Mr. Hobarf's knowledge of the Orient made him useful to the Army in the Far East. Mrs. Hobart headed for Mexico to travel and live during her husband's absence. "The Peacock Sheds His Tail" was written as a result of her Mexican sojourn. Her latest novel, "The Cleft Rock," deals with several generations of a California family.

The male members of the luncheon program are: Frederick Gutheim, "The Potomac"; Merle Miller, "The Sure Thing", and Hartzell Spence, "Happily Ever After."

Tickets, at $3, are available at local bookstores.

Cooking Cues

For a new kind of dessert, put a cup of drained canned fruit cocktail in a container, add a cup of sour cream and two cups of cut marshmallows; mix well, cover, and allow to stand in the refrigerator overnight. Serve chilled in sherbet glasses to six or eight people.

Salad 'Bait' for Youngsters

Youngsters usually like a salad if it has raisins in it. Here's a raisin-carrot-banana combination they'll really go for. Pour boiling water over a cup of seedless raisins and let them stand about 5 minutes, then drain them well and chill them. When you're ready to serve put the chilled raisins in a bowl with a cup of grated carrot and a cup of diced banana, and enough mayonnaise to moisten; mix lightly so as not to crush banana. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves to six hungry young people.

Four O'Clock Pickup

For a quick 4 o'clock pick-up on a warm day mix equal amounts of chilled prune juice and milk; add a scoop of vanilla ice cream to each glass, if desired, and serve with long spoons and straws.

Fresh Peaches and Ham

Fresh peaches are delicious served with a slice of broiled ham. Peel, pit and quarter the peaches and saute them lightly in a little butter or margarine. Sprinkle them with a little sugar while they are cooking.

Science Tackles the Unhappy Marriage

Steps in Contacting Competent Counselor

This is the last in a series of six articles on marriage problems.

By Gerald W. Johnson

WHO are the people who take up the exacting and not very rewarding work of the marriage counselor?

As a rule, you will find them connected with some public institution. It may be a university or college. It may be a church, or a medical school, or a department of public welfare, or a social agency.

Some of the ablest have been judges, and still retain more or less official connection with the courts. Many are engaged in teaching, usually psychology, psychiatry or sociology. Some economists have been notably successful as marriage counselors.

Private practice as a marriage counselor, although it has been tried, is hardly practical. The people who need the service most, and whose cases consume most time, are hardly ever able to pay much. They ought to pay what they can, for they are taking up the time of a specialist whose training was expensive.

But as a rule, the marriage counselor depends for his living on the salary paid by the institution, to which he turns in the fees as a partial offset to the expense of what is really a public service.

In this there is one small advantage; it is not a profession that attracts quacks and racketeers. There is not enough money in it.

Would Be Omniscient

OF COURSE nobody will ever be a perfect marriage counselor, because nobody will ever know enough. To be perfectly equipped for the work, the counselor should know more about the body than any doctor, more about the mind than any psychologist, and a great deal about law, teaching, business, religion, art and science.

In fact, he should know practically everything except which side his own bread is buttered on. If he knows too much about that, he will be thinking of himself when he should be thinking about those he is advising.

The people engaged in this work are making every effort to keep it on a high level, for an ignorant faker could do more harm than many able counselors can do good.

Seven years ago they organized the American Association of Marriage Counselors, of which Dr. Abraham Stone of New York is president. This group is closely connected with a dozen learned societies. It is in contact with all the leading institutions in the field.

How to Seek Help

BUT information about the associations and conferences is not of much help to men and women who feel the need of advice. Their course is not altogether simple.

The lucky ones are those who are personally acquainted with a wise and sympthetic clergyman, or doctor, or social worker. Such people are frequently good marriage counselors themselves. They always know where more competent ones are to be found.

If you don't know a marriage counselor, the smart move is to write to the sociology department of the nearest university or first-class college. They always know. Usually there will be a marriage counselor on the staff. In any case there will be some one who knows the field.

The point is to start with one judgment that you can trust. For most of us, social workers, doctors and clergymen are the best bets, although a judge, especially one who has handled many divorce cases, is not bad.

Sometimes, too, a smart old lawyer, particularly one who has had a lot to do with estates and family matters, knows more about marriage counselors than you could expect. Some are fine counselors themselves, when they will give advice on that subject.

Some Prefer Strangers

THERE are many people, especially in the big cities, who don't know anyone they are willling to approach in any of these professions. Yet they are not left up in the air There are always the sociology departments in the colleges and universities, and it costs only a letter to ask them.

In fact, some people will prefer this approach in any case. If you are going to discuss intimate matters, you may discuss them more easily with a perfect stranger, whom you will probably never see again, than with the most intimate friend.

In a way, you will not be a stranger to the marriage counselor, for you needn't think you are going to tell him anything new. However strange your yarn may seem to you, the chances are a hundred to one that he has heard it many times before.

After all, you know, listening to such yarns is his business.

Training Is Rigorous

BUT such details concern only those people who need marriage advice, for themselves, or for their children, or for a friend.

What interests the general reader is the fact that here is a scientific specialty frankly concerned with the promotion of human happiness. Furthermore, it is studied by people rigorously trained to look for truth at any cost.

They report that happiness in marriage is entirely possible for the great majority. To cap that, they assert that this pleasant prospect isn't confined to Junior and Sis, but applies to Uncle Emil and Aunt Lib, as well.

Perhaps even Dad and Mom, with a little expert advice, might cut out a lot of foolishness and as a result get a kick out of life that they had almost forgotten ever was in it.

About Apple Juice Varieties of Paprika

1. What is the difference between apple juice and (sweet) apple cider?

2. Is there another variety of paprika besides the common sweet type? I have several Hungarian recipes which call for paprika (not pepper) and I feel reasonably sure there must be a stronger variety than I have found. If so, what is it called and where can it be purchased?

M. J.

This is the difference between apple juice and cider as given by "The Encyclopedia of Cookery" (Wise & Co., N. Y): "The highest grade of apple juice is a more refined product than ordinary cider. Harmless yeasts and molds develop rapidly in juice, after it has been pressed from the apple. If this development is unchecked, the delicate apple flavor of the juice changes rapidly. By a special process, these organisms are destroyed at low temperature in high-grade canned apple juice without affecting the vitamin content and the juice is then sealed in a vacuum. In addition, apple juice is put through very fine filters before canning.

Cider, the less refined product, is put through rough rather than fine filters. An infinitesimal amount of benzoate of soda or another benzoate preparation is sometimes added to cider as a preservative. This is not done with apple juice."

There seems to be only one paprika sold in this country—the extremely mild variety with which you are familiar. Paprika is the mildest member of the family of plants called capsicum. Since you wish a more potent spice, I suggest you use one of paprika's more aggressive cousins, chile powder, black, white, or red pepper, or cayenne. Or, creole pepper, which is a combination of chili powder and other spices, is sometimes used in Hungarian dishes.

Generally speaking, the members of the capsicum family would rate about like this in order of pungency—the least pungent being first: Paprika, creole pepper which includes chili powder, red pepper, cayenne pepper. White pepper is milder than black pepper because it is made from the white inside kernel of the peppercorn after the more pungent outer skin has been removed. Black pepper is the entire pepper corn which has been ground.

I would like to know where I may purchase Gumbo File Powder. I have been making crab gumbo, but had to omit the file.

D. M.

You can buy this spice at a large grocery on Connecticut ave. which can be reached by calling DIstrict 8250.

We are hoping to rent our house furnished around the first of the year. Can you please tell us exactly what "furnished" means? Does it include kitchen utensils and appliances, table silver and linen, towels and bed linens, china and bric-a-brac? Also, should a vacuum cleaner be provided for the tenants?

M. R. D.

I have checked this with a real estate firm in your area—Arlington—and they tell me that the term "furnished" means different things to different people. Usually, it means furnished except for linens, dishes and silver. Houses have been rented "completely furnished," which means everything, including all utilities. However, that is unusual, since linens are seldom included.

Inexpensive bric-a-brac which can be easily replaced is often left, expensive items are not.

As for providing a vacuum sweeper—of course, if you wish, you can, but it is seldom done and not expected.

Can you please tell me how to care for the leather top of a coffee table? The table is not new and is slightly scratched and scarred. I am anxious to preserve the leather and protect it as much as possible against further marring.

M. F. R.

Give the leather several thin applications of paste wax. Allow each coat of wax to dry thoroughly and buff to a hard finish before applying the next.

Will you please share with me your recipe for a Hungarian dish called Chicken Paprikash?

J. D.

PETUNIA!

CHICKEN PAPRIKASH

1 chicken, jointed
2 or 3 tablespoons tomato puree
1 or 2 large onions
2 or 3 pimientos
1 tablespoon paprika
Salt

Sprinkle the chicken with salt and let stand for 2 or 3 hours. Fry the chopped onion in a little fat and when slightly browned mix in the tomato puree and season with salt and paprika. Add chicken, brown, add a little water and simmer until chicken is tender. Garnish with sliced and previously cooked pimientos.

I have a medium-tone blue pottery table lamp which I would like to repaint white. Is it possible to do this at home? Also how would I go about it?

CONSTANT READER.

You can change the color of the lamp base by applying a paint which is especially designed for use on glass, pottery and similar materials. After this paint is applied the article is heated in the oven at 300 degrees F. to give a permanent finish. The paint can be purchased at well-stocked paint stores which sell artists' paints.

I have received several pairs of felt baby bootees and I am wondering if there is any way in which they can be cleaned?

J. E. R.

The felt bootees can be cleaned at home by shampooing them with suds from a soap jelly. To make the jelly, dissolve one cup of mild soap flakes in five cups of hot water. Let cool to form jelly. Now whip some to a lather and apply to the bootees with a small, soft brush. As the suds become soiled, wipe off and use clean suds. When the felt is clean, wipe with a cloth frequently wrung out of clean water thoroughly to remove all soap. When rinsed, daub with a dry absorbent cloth to remove as much moisture as possible and thus hasten the drying. Before placing to dry, stuff with absorbent paper to hold shape and dry in the sun or a warm place.

Food Facts

For a hearty luncheon or supper dish and slices of frankfurters to a soup of dried split peas: use either the yellow or the green peas for the soup.

Some of the strained and chopped baby foods, such as prunes and peaches are delicious folded into a gelatin salad for the whole family.

Do not shell fresh lima beans until you are ready to use them since they lose vitamin C (ascorbic acid) if they are shelled long in advance. Keep the lima bean pods in the refrigerator until you are ready to cook them.

For a flavor change, bake fish fillets in a creole sauce and serve with potato puff and buttered spinach.

If you're expecting a crowd for a Sunday breakfast party and plan to serve bacon and eggs, an easy way to prepare the bacon is to place it on a rack set in a shallow pan and bake it in a hot (400 F.) oven for about 12 minutes, or until it is crisp and brown.

In Washington's Autumn Bridal Procession

St. Mathew's Cathedral was the scene of the marriage October 25 of Miss Jo Ann Barbara McCarthy to Walter Granville Stoneman. The Rev. John E. Argaut officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Edward McCarthy of Montreal, Canada. Mr. Stoneman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arch Stoneman of Sand Springs, Okla.

Wearing white faille and carrying an old fashioned bouquet centered with an orchid, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Miss Doris Marchesi of West Englewood, N. J., and Lynn R. Wickland of Westminster, Md., were honor attendants for the couple. Following a reception at Collingwood, Alexandria, Va., the newlyweds left for a motor trip to Mexico and the West Coast. They will be at home in Takoma Park, Md.

The bride has been employed by the Department of State and the Department of the Army in Washington. She was graduated from Strathcona Academy in Montreal and Skidmore College.

A graduate of Oklahoma A & M, Mr. Stoneman is chief of liaison and logistics in the Washington office of the Inter-American Geodetic Survey.

Hardy—Hood

Mrs. Frances Mahala Hood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl A. Northrop of Galveston, Tex., was married October 11 in Galveston to George Dray Hardy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Merle Hardy of this city. The Rev. Walton B. Gardner performed the ceremony at the Central Methodist Church.

Wearing steel blue satin and carrying white orchids and chrysanthemums, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Miss Mavern Devine was maid of honor and Robert Merle Hardy was his son's best man. The ushers included Irvin Cook and Raymond Schoomer.

The newlyweds will live in Mount Rainier, Md., following their wedding trip to New Orleans, La., and Miami, Fla.

Hessler

MRS. BEN CHARLES HARTIG, JR., whose marriage took place October 21 at the Holy Redeemer Church, is the former Miss Margaret Ann Metzger of Flint, Mich. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Hartig of this city. The Rev. Louis P. Gauthier performed the ceremony and a reception followed at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Harold Frecoe. The newlyweds will spend their honeymoon in Bermuda

MRS. JACK QUINTER SPITLER wore a gown of white satin and chantilly lace for her wedding on October 28 in Cherrydale Baptist Church, Arlington. Attention Mr. President!

MARGARET SANG AND CAROLINA LOVED HER

Cullowhee, N. C. (Pop. 1500) was spell-bound as Margaret Truman swept in surrounded by Secret Service men, charmed the village with her singing, and whisked away again.

Parade Picture Magazine was there, too. Its camera-reporter caught the full glamour of the great event. Cullowhee's reaction to Margaret makes wonderful picture-reading . . . tomorrow in The Sunday Post. Don't miss it.

AND IT'S YOUR "Anniversary" TOO

How is the President doing at the end of his first "real" year in office? Edward T. Folliard looks at the record, Sunday in Section II.

D. C. COURT SYSTEM DIAGRAMMED WITH PICTURES OF ALL JUDGES

As the Nation's Capital, Washington has an awesome number of courts, many of them no more "local" than the Supreme Court. They are all part of the D. C. judiciary, though, and with the creation of still more judgeships, the system is quite complex.

A "tree" chart in The Sunday Post will show you how the courts interrelate, and who are the men who occupy the benches. And in eight daily articles, starting Monday, the new judges just appointed here will be interestingly profiled.

Elizabeth Maguire writes the first of a series of delightful stories on Washington's embassy homes and hostesses. Peggy Preston tells you about the new midnight blue furs, now being introduced here by a French designer.

Parade Picture Mazagine asks the famous Schiaparelli how she got her start in the fashion world. Read her answer in "The Turning Point."

Sesqui Fetes Set to Begin April 1, 1950

Sesquicentennial festivities are now scheduled to begin April 1 next year as part of the traditional Cherry Blossom Festival, Edward Boykin, National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission director, announced yesterday.

Previously the opening was planned for April 15. A pageant depicting George Washington and Major L'Enfant surveying the city's site from what is now Capitol Hill, and Washington conferring the next day with Georgtown residents to ask them to turn over fields and pastures for the city will be presented at the Cherry Blossom Festival.

Interest in obtaining various concessions at the Freedom Fair, due to open July 4, is building up, but no arrangements have been made as yet, pending employment of a concessions manager. At that time, "We will take the best deal we can get" on such concessions as sale of hot dogs, soft drinks and parking space, Boykin said.

One proposed concessionaire is already unacceptable, Boykin said, because of an FBI report listing him as a prominent member of the Communist Party for 12 years and contributor to Communist activities.

Boykin told a meeting of the Arts Club Thursday night that the man had come to him three months ago offering a certified check for $25,000 in return for the concession for publication of patriotic and children's comic books in connection with the Fair. He repeated the offer once, but Boykin said, "I won't talk to him."

Other proposals for entertainment concessions have included monkey, snake, midget and wax museum shows illustrating 50 famous crimes. Boykin said no decision has been made on these, but certainly there will be "No Sally Rand."

Twenty-five foreign governments have indicated they would like to participate with exhibits linking their nations with American history. Among them are Belgium, which proposed an exhibit showing the signing of the Treaty of Ghent, ending the War of 1812, and Britain, which suggested sending over an original volume of the King James version of the Bible and the Rosetta Stone, its greatest archeological treasure.

Dodson Sent For Mental Observation

Francis E. Dodson, 31-year-old Arlington policeman under indictment for housebreaking and attempted rape, yesterday was ordered committed to the State Mental Hospital at Marion, Va., for observation.

At the same time, Arlington Circuit Court Judge Walter T McCarthy denied a motion that Dodson be released on bond, made by his attorney, John Paul Jones. No trial date has been set yet in the case.

The suspended Arlington policeman, his bullet-shattered right leg still in a cast, listened attentively yesterday to testimony at the preliminary hearing, but did not take the stand.

One of his alleged victims, H. Jack Bartels of 2810-B S. 16th rd., testified he answered a knock at his door about 12:30 a. m., September 29. A man outside said he was lost, Bartels declared, and when he opened the door, a masked man "shoved a .38 Colt in my stomach."

He was told "This is a stick up," Bartel's said. Mrs. Bartels, who was upstairs preparing for bed, was ordered down by the man, later identified as Dodson, who forced both of them to disrobe, Bartels testified. He then took the couple upstairs, put Bartels in a closet and made "indecent advances" to Mrs. Bartels.

Bartels said he was later let out of the closet by Dodson who forced him to watch further "indecent advances." He finally tackled Dodson and wrestled with him while Mrs. Bartels escaped with their two children, asleep in another room, Bartels said. Dodson was wounded by a neighbor as he attempted to follow Bartels downstairs.

Policeman William H. Dinsmore, who helped arrest his fellow officer the night of the alleged crime, said Dodson called out, 'Hello Dinsmore, hello, Joe" as he and policeman Joseph Crissman approached him.

Dinsmore testified Dodson told him he thought he was at his own home, at 1984 S. 12th rd., at that time.

Attention, Lawyers!

Sunday's Washington Post will feature a complete diagram of the D. C. judiciary system, showing how the many courts here interrelate. Pictures of each jurist will be included. And Monday's Post will have the first of eight profile articles on the newly appointed Appellate, District and Supreme Court judges.

Duties Assigned Arlington Police At Rosslyn Circle

Arlington Police Chief Harry L. Woodyard said yesterday he has ordered his men to assume concurrent jurisdiction with Park Police over Rosslyn Circle.

Woodyard said he took the action "in the absence of any correspondence" from Interior Department officials, defining exact division of duties between the two forces in the area.

A conference to "untangle" police jurisdiction in the Arlington approach to Key Bridge was held between, Washington, county and Interior Department officials in September. Although there was general agreement about cooperation, no specific statements were issued.

Nehru Nears End Of 9500-Mile Tour

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—Prime Minister Jawaharial Nehru of India will end his goodwil tour of America here Monday as he began it—promising little, hoping for much, but too proud to ask for a thing.

In a 25-day tour that carried him 9500 miles through this country and Canada, Nehru has proclaimed neutrality in the cold war. But he has outlined strategy that the West seems to like although Russia did not.

Today he said his visit to the United States "has been very profitable and very enjoyable and has educated me a great deal."

In more than 40 public speeches he called for peace; said he doesn't like communism; said he finds Americans friendly and peace-loving, and said India is willing to fight if aggressors imperil human freedom.

He promised friendship to those who will respond with generous and not-demanding friendship; and fair treatment to American investors willing to help his country industrialize.

He said India is not asking for a handout, but hopes government and private investors can see a way to cooperate. He plans to see some shows and visit Saturday morning with Albert Einstein. He is due to leave for London at 2:30 p. m. Monday.

The West hoped Nehru would take its side in the cold war. Observers felt he had outlined in his speeches different strategy that was satisfactory to Washington.

There was belief India will help steer Asia, including China, away from the Kremlin tieup, but that Western democracies can't hope to woo Asia into friendship unless they do something to help Asians prosper.

Attempted Murder Charged to Wife

MRS. MARGARET PIATT

WILFORD PIATT

Wife, in Jail, Finally Spends Restful Night

Port Orchard, Wash., Nov. 4 (AP).—Wilford Piatt, 34, admitted tonight he liked to make love more than his younger wife, but he said he would try to reform when she comes home from jail, where she is charged with trying to have him murdered because he wanted to make love every night."

But his wife of 15 years, Margaret Susan, 31, tiny, blue-eyed mother of his two children said he was in no hurry to go home.

"I feel swell here," she said in her cell. "I just spent the most restful night I've had in 15 years."

Mrs. Piatt confessed she had said two men more than $1500 to get rid of her too-ardent husband, but they "double-crossed" her.

Reporters told Piatt tonight his wife had wearied of lovemaking every night for 15 years.

"Well, I do like to make love more than she does," he said. "But I think I'm just about an average man that way."

"I love her and I want her back with the family," he said. "I'll try to be a better husband to her."

I Have As Much to Offer"

The couple was married in Columbus, Kans., in 1935. They have a daughter, 14, and a son, 9.

"I don't know why she would want to get rid of me," he said. "I have as much to offer as any man."

One of the "hired killers," Holmes D. Scott, 23, said Mrs. Piatt told him she had tried twice to kill her husband. Once she tried a poisoned drink, which didn't work, and when she started to bludgeon him in his sleep he woke up, Scott quoted her.

Mrs. Piatt was charged with attempted murder. She accused the "killers" of welching after she gave them more than $1500.

Scott, a former private detective, and Wallace Motters, 22-year-old Navy veteran, were held under $3500 bond each.

Unexpected Job

Reinforcing Delays Span On Capitol St.

Completion of the South Capitol st. bridge, scheduled for November 15, has been held up about a month by some unexpected work.

Samuel R. Harrison, deputy director of highways for the District, said the delay was not caused by the steel strike but by the need to reinforce the draw span—work not originally planned.

Public Roads Administration announced yesterday it will open bids November 15 on a paving contract to connect Suitland pkwy. with the eastern approach to the bridge. PRA officials said this work could be finished when the bridge is completed.

The parkway, which cuts across Anacostia from Suitland, Md., now stops at Firth Sterling ave. The project involves extending the parkway about 2250 feet west to the bridge approach. The District will contribute $15,000 toward the work, Harrison said, because part of the land is District-owned.

Connection of the parkway and the bridge, Harrison stated, should have a considerable affect of easing traffic congestion on Eleventh st. and Sousa Bridges.

Racial Case Withdrawn In Georgia

Thomasville, Ga., Nov. 4. (AP).—Mrs. Dollie Seay White and her husband, George White, today withdrew a suit for $300,000 damages against Lowndes County school officials and six individuals.

The Whites filed the suit last month, asserting their children were barred from county schools because school officials contended they had Negro blood. They charged violation of the United States Constitution.

The day after the suit was filed, warrants charging miscegenation were sworn out against the couple. Trial of the case is set later this month.

U. S. District Judge A. B. Conger signed an order dismissing the damage suit today, His order said the plaintiffs had voluntarily asked that the suit be withdrawn and had given notice in open court they would not reinstate the suit. They gave no reason.

Judge Conger was of the opinion his court never had any jurisdiction in the case.

Marie Stopes Points to Sin In America

London, Nov. 4. (AP).—Dr. Marie Stopes, 70, "the mother of birth control," said today America's morals are much worse than Britain's, even if contraceptives are dispensed here in slot machines."

She condemned such slot machine sales as carrying her birth control policy a little too far.

Dr. Stopes, who opened the world's first birth control clinic in 1921, said she had received many letters from Americans asking advice.

"I am horrified to learn of the great numbers of young American girls who practice free love before they are married," she said. "In Britain, you certainly do not come across 16-year-old girls snatching at sex experience in the backs of cars."

"It is quite repugnant," said Dr. Stopes, who has taught birth control to hundreds of women, including princesses and maharanees, in her "married women only" clinic in London.

"I condemn the selling of contraceptives in slot machines for both moral and psychological reasons," she said. "They are an affront to decency and incite young people needlessly to commit sin."

Dr. Stopes also denounced the Kinsey Report for its "gross exaggerations" of sex life, saying that obviously many of the subjects had spoken with "their tongues in their cheeks."

Dr. Stopes said she had ceased arguing about the merits of birth Control," to the altar of Westminster Church 10 years ago, when she chained a copy of her book, "Roman Catholic Methods of Birth Control," to the alter of Westminster Cathedral.

"After that the Roman Catholic Church gave up attacking me personally," she said.

LAFF-A-DAY

"I've shot men for less than this!"

The Lyon's Den

NEW YORK.—When Henry J. Kaiser was a 15-year-old salesman he made a deal with an Adirondack photo-supply man. In return for room and board, Kaiser would work without salary. If, at the end of the year, he doubled the sales, he'd be made a 50 percent partner. At 17 he won his partnership . . . He decided to settle in Daytona, Fla., and made a deal with the railroad company for the free transportation of his six employes and his photo supplies. But then he could find no place to rent . . . A stranger with whom he engaged in conversation suggested: "If you can't rent, why don't you build?" The man, a bridge-builder, gave him the loan, which eventually enabled him to build branches in Palm Beach, Miami, Jacksonville, etc. And this suggestion and loan from a stranger put Henry J. Kaiser into the building business.

On the day after Buddy Clark, the singer, died in the Hollywood plane crash, the grieving Mrs. Clark received a visit from her neighbor in Encino, Clark Gable. He wore dungarees, walked across the field to the Clark home, rang the doorbell and came in. Then, for three hours, he sat with Mrs. Clark. "I know how you must feel," he began, for he, too, had suffered such a loss, when his wife, Carole Lombard, was killed in a plane crash. "Nothing people will tell you does any good," he said. "Nobody can help, at such a moment." . . . And, having helped, Gable left at dusk and walked across the field back to his home.

Marbleized Paper

Have you ever noticed the inside covers of some of the books published 30 or 40 years ago? Often they have a marblelike design that is supposed to be just the thing for high-class volumes.

You and your children can have a bit of fun making some of your own marbleized paper. There's no particular use for it except for decorative purposes. But the children will enjoy the process of "manufacture" and like showing the results to their friends.

Here's what you do. Fill a pan with an inch or so of water. The pan should be large enough to enable the sheets of paper to be placed flat on the surface. The pieces which are to be marbleized should have a soft, not a glazed surface. Drop a small amount of printer's ink on the surface of the water and let it spread as it will or gently stir the water so that the ink covers the entire surface. Because of it's oily nature, the ink will arrange itself in patterns. Then gently place the paper on the water for a moment. Lift it by one corner carefully and put it aside to dry. A number of prints may be made from one application of ink. Black ink is quite suitable, though colored ink may be more interesting to the children.

To Let You Know

If you remember me today . . . You must remember too . . . That I adored you, darling, and . . . I thought the world of you . . . You must remember that I said . . . How it would break my heart . . . If anything should change your mind . . . And we should ever part . . . Well, this is just to let you know . . . That when you went away . . . You broke my heart and it is still . . . A broken heart today . . . I cannot find a smile as sweet . . . As once you gave to me . . . Or any solace that would match . . . Your loving company . . . And this is just to tell you, d

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

This Is How Dangerous Leftist Movements Sometimes Begin

G. J. Winters of 4004 Beecher st. nw. is still chuckling at a cartoon which appeared in the "Saturday Evening Post" recently, and sent me a clipping of it.

It showed a woman driver whose left arm was extended horizontally, while her turn indicator arrow signalled that she would turn to the right.

I laughed at it, too. But one of the girls in the office, peering over my shoulder at the cause of all this hilarity, got pretty huffy.

"That's just like a man," she snapped, "to laugh at a woman driver whose only crime is being doubly careful to give a proper signal."

(Non-drivers who are unfamiliar with the required hand signals for turns have just wasted 12 seconds reading an item they didn't understand.)

WHEN DOES A PRANK STOP BEING FUNNY?

"Your wonderful District police don't begin to compare with our courageous Arlington cops," writes Miss F. Fox of Arlington, Va.

"Halloween night I saw a heroic member of our force make a singlehanded capture of two hardened criminals—aged 7 and 8—who were guilty of the crime of putting soap on store windows.

"Without so much as drawing his gun, he forced the criminals to wipe the soap off the windows, thereby righting the wrong they had done.

"Don't you think this fearless cop should be recommended for a promotion?"

The sarcasm is probably well-deserved. On Halloween, kids are supposed to go about soaping windows (it's probably the least harmful mischief available to them) and the thought of a policeman making a big fuss about it is slightly ridiculous.

CLOVER PICKER—"A recent item in The Washington Post indicates that five-leaf clovers are very rare," protests Dorothy Bergstein of 3422 S. Stafford st., Arlington, Va. "But they're not. Here is a five-leaf clover, flanked by two four-leaf clovers. I've found dozens of them, and have also found six-leaf clovers"

At the same time, many of these so-called "childish pranks" go entirely too far, and cause property damage, personal injury, or both.

That kind of stuff just isn't funny, and it's the duty of policemen to prevent it. But there are times when it's rather hard to decide what constitutes a prank and what a breach of the peace.

I suppose that when it happens to the other fellow it's a very funny joke, but when it happens to us we ought to be able to get the law on the little rapscallions.

But I think that if I had been the policeman on that beat I would have solved the problem by failing to see the kids until after they were finished with their soaping.

Then I might have given them just enough of a chase to provide a highlight for their evening.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four playful, housebroken kittens; their mother is an excellent mouser." (Shepherd 0939.)

"Brindle dog, part-boxer, lovely pet; the family who owned him moved away." (Randolph 6305.)

"Cute, very lovable, housebroken 3-month-old puppy that eats anything you give it." (Ludlow 3-8707.)

THE OLD QUARTET

There's another feather in the collective cap of the D. C. Keys these days—a Red Feather, to be exact.

Individually, the Keys are Lead Vince Gingerich, the lawyer; Tenor Mickey Beall of the phone company; Baritone Jesse Nussear of the Post Office Department, and Bass Ed Place of the National Wildlife Federation.

Collectively, the Keys are the Barber Shop Quartet that was such a smash hit when it sang on my program that the WRC switchboard was flooded with requests for an encore, and I had to bring them back for another program.

Sam Holland of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, Inc. (I love that name) has just written a ditty called "The Red Feather Song."

The Keys made a special arrangement of the song, and introduced it publicly at the Government Unit Report Luncheon at the Washington Hotel recently.

I can't whistle the tune for you in this space, but the words go like this:

"Hand out those feathers . . . those bright red feathers . . . and chase those blues away . . . No time to stop . . . Our drive must go over the top . . . If you tell 'em . . . you can sell 'em . . . the Chest is here to stay . . . Say! . . . Now all together . . . Hand out those feathers . . . Let's go, we're on our way.

REFRAIN:

Sell the Chest where e'er you go . . . all around the town . . . Show the poor and needy that . . . we'll never let them down . . . Tell all those less fortunate . . . Just spread the word around: . . . The Chest is here to stay."

'TWAS EVER THUS

The current edition of the "T. B. Counselor" (published by the patients in the tuberculosis division at Gallinger Hospital) slyly observes:

"When a man gets too old to set a bad example, he starts giving good advice."

Plan Drafted To Impeach President

By Drew Pearson

Mum is supposed to be the word, but a secret resolution has been drawn up authorizing impeachement proceedings against President Truman — in case he lets the coal strike continue to a national danger point.

GWINN

The resolution was drafted by a handful of Republicans and Dixiecrats just before Congress adjourned and then locked in a safe deposit box. They plan to introduce it next January—if the national economy is seriously jeopardized by strikes. Ringleader of the impeachment move is Congressman Ralph Gwinn, (R., N. Y.), with an assist from Gene Cox, (D., Ga.).

Specifically the secret resolution charges President Truman with "nonfeasance" of office. It is alleged that he neglected the economic welfare of all the people in order to help a tightly organized minority—the labor unions.

The resolution further points out that the President could have prevented "economic disaster" by invoking the Taft-Hartley Act. This constitutes neglect of duty, the resolution charges.

Now that the steel strike is being settled, the wind has been taken out of the impeachment plan, but it may still be revived in case John L. Lewis' coal strike gets worse.

Note 1—Should the resolution ever reach the floor of the House of Representatives, it would stand almost no chance of approval.

Note 2—Gwinn is the Congressman who mailed out 900,000 franked letters last year containing 2,250,000 copies of speeches against public housing, Federal aid to education and rent control. He has been the chief congressional megaphone for the Foundation for Economic Education, financed by some of the Nation's largest corporations.

Supreme Court Feud

In Washington, where hostesses keep careful tab on who's feuding with whom, it would be an unforgivable boner to confuse the identity of the Supreme Court's two feuding justices, the honorables Hugo Black and Robert Jackson.

Yet that's exactly what happened the other day at no less an occasion than an official swearing-in. Justice Black got the assignment of administering the oath to Federal Trade Commissioner John Carson. As the ceremony reached its climax, FTC Chairman Lowell Mason announced solemnly: "Ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Carson will now take the oath, administered by Mr. Justice Jackson."

The assembled dignitaries howled at the mistake. Chairman Mason turned a sunset crimson.

Later, former Senator Jim Mead was appointed to another vacancy in the Federal Trade Commission. Mason got on the phone to arrange the ceremony, invited Justice Jackson to give the oath.

Jackson agreed, then added: "By the way, this will give you a chance to call me Mr. Justice Black."

Record of Dulles

Speech before Detroit Economic Club, March, 1939—"Only hysteria entertains the idea that Germany, Italy or Japan contemplates war on us." War started five months later.

Statement, October 21, 1930—"Germany has made great progress under the Dawes Plan. Her national income and government income have grown to a point where the reparations charge constitutes a readily bearable percentage." One year later Dulles was retained by Brown Bros.-Harriman to salvage something out of the German bond wreckage. He could salvage nothing.

Statement about Gerhard Westrick, the Hitler agent who came to New York in 1940 after the war started: "I don't believe he has done anything wrong. I knew him in the old days and I had a high regard for his integrity."

Page 690 of Who's Who in America states in Dulles' self-penned biography that he was "secretary of The Hague Peace Conference in 1907." The records of The Hague Conference list 20 secretaries, but Dulles' name is not among them. He was then only 19 years old.

Who's Who also states that Dulles was "member, reparations commission and Supreme Economic Council, 1919."

Records of the commission state that its members were Bernard Baruch, Norman H. Davis, Vance McCormick, Ellis Dressel, alternate. Dulles is not listed. He was then only 31 years old.

Note—Who's Who biographies are always submitted to the individual for proofreading.

Attorney General Howard McGrath has laid down the law to Justice Department subordinates on civil liberties. He wants no one's constitutional toes stepped on in the fight against crime. McGrath will wage war on crime, but has made it clear that he would rather let a crime go unpunished than violate constitutional rights. "Individual freedom," he says, "is the background of democracy."
